NEW OPINION OF NORWICH Stereopticon Lecture by Prof. F. P. Gulliver Describes it from 1659 to the Present Time with Its Many Changes --Old and Interesting Views--Reasons for Slow Growth and Suggestions to Promote Growth.

At the annual meeting of the Norwich Board of Trade on Monday evening Prof. F. P. Gulliver gave a stereopticon talk upon the development of Norwich and greater Norwich which had the large gathering of three-quarters of an hour after a two-hour session, so great was the interest in the subject he had so admirably worked up and presented in such a preliminary manner.

Many other larger cities. The water supply can be increased, as there is the Passaic brook and Gardner Lake. The electric facilities are needed. A trolley line could be run up Broadway or Bath street, circling through Durkee lane into Franklin street, around which curve every car should pass and have a central station in Franklin street at the corner of Durkee lane and Franklin street, where there are old buildings which could be done away with. The freight business should be done by the freight depot at all times through Shuteck street and possibly the electrification of a part of the street from the freight house. There should be a trolley road by all times Washington street, going through to Yantic, Lebanon, Colchester and Hartford.

He showed maps of Norwich in 1811 and 1822 showing the five turnpikes, three from the Norwich Town section, to Canterbury, Lebanon, Colchester and Hartford, and two from the city, to New London and Providence. An early view of the Falls was also shown. He referred to the fact that the West Side of the city was built out of the Yantic because the Yantic was a turbulent stream and could not be crossed often times and that the West Side was built out because there were six fire engines in the city and none on the West Side. It was to be known as the town of Yantic.

Fill in Yantic Cove. Yantic cove, he said, should be filled in and with that done there could be a street laid out from Rockwell street to Broadway, which would run across Washington street and the South place, for something of value, and the street would be made in making improvements, and by a gradual rise and in that lays the great future of Norwich in the time when it has 150,000 to 200,000 inhabitants, and the city could be laid out from Munroe street and cross the filled in cove down into Falls avenue, and he showed how the unoccupied land would be developed by the planting of the John T. Young boiler Co., of which he showed an advance sketch which drew forth much applause.

The territorial limits of the city have changed many times. Once in 1784 it was enlarged at all times the effort to have the West Side and Norwich Town separated from the rest resulted in Norwich Town being cut out of the county and he showed views of the old court house, old store, voting place and school house at all times. The territory was reduced to its smallest area when without Boswellville and Greenville, while from 1833 to 1874 it had the largest territory, including 1874. Greenville was added, and for a time there was a section between, known as Roswellville, which did not come into the city until 1874. Greenville was added, and for a time there was a section between, known as Roswellville, which did not come into the city until 1874. Greenville was added, and for a time there was a section between, known as Roswellville, which did not come into the city until 1874.

Conditions Can Be Overcome. While the geographical conditions are complex, they are not too difficult and Norwich is not as badly situated as CAPTAIN HAGBERG GETS QUARTERS FOR COMPANY. Will Have Private Residence With Heated Rooms and Beds—in Good Location.

On Monday Captain John Hagberg of the Third company returned from Washington, a day ahead of what he expected. He had been to the national headquarters to get the necessary papers when they were to take the inauguration ceremony. They will spend four days in Washington. He has secured a private residence, where the entire company will be quartered, all having beds. The location is close being about ten minutes' walk from the new station. He found prices way up and quarters hard to get at a reasonable price, but he considered he did well in securing the place he did.

CARPENTERS CELEBRATED THEIR ANNIVERSARY. Union Was Organized Twenty-Three Years Ago—Membership of 240.

The twenty-third anniversary of the Carpenters' union was celebrated last evening in Carpenters' hall with a largely attended social session. Members of the other local unions. The business meeting was dispensed with and those present enjoyed themselves with a chorale and the fixtures, served under the auspices of the committee for the evening—M. J. Kelley, Scott Conklin and Edward Mallett. Most of the furniture was from a photograph by William Hopkins.

After the feast was disposed of President Patrick Barry called the meeting to order and a number spoke in an interesting way, among whom were President John Shea of the Plumbers' union, President Florence J. Dineen of the Carpenters and Decorators' union and State President James Grierson. A smoker and social concert followed, and the evening closed with various volunteers.

This leading union of the city enters its twenty-fourth year with a membership of 240 and in a strong financial condition. The following are its officers: President, Patrick Barry; vice president, John Shea; secretary, Frank S. Edmonds; recording secretary and business agent, M. J. Kelley; treasurer, James Grierson; conductors, James Grierson, Robert McNeely, Amos Baldwin, Thomas Craney; auditors, Christopher Dineen, Thomas Craney and Charles Burrows; delegates to state convention in Hartford in February, M. J. Kelley, Thomas Craney and James Grierson.
