Denials by May Burns. In rebuttal, May Burns was called and testified that she did not get a letter from Nellie Whipple which did not tell anyone that she did. She was never at the Jennie Whipple house. She denied telling Addie that she had been in a Schenectady house and Addie had told her that if her folks made any trouble she would send her to some hill, the name of which she could not remember. Arguments Reached in Burns Case.

State's Attorney Will Finish This Morning and Case will be in Jury's Hands by Afternoon--Pedler had Time on Witness Stand with His Book--Clarence Broley Called and May Burns and Others Called in Rebuttal

In the superior court here on Wednesday the evidence in the case against May Burns was completed and three of the arguments were heard before court adjourned for the day.

At the opening of the afternoon session, Attorney Ailing, who is assisting the state's attorney, made the first argument. He turned the case over to the angel child and laid great stress upon the treatment of her by Addie Burns, whom he gave a big setting out. He argued that the evidence proved that Addie Burns was in the house when the assault was committed, and that the child was not established.

He was followed by Attorney Stoddard, who contended that the company was working well when he entered the office, and so on. But it is stated that there is no disposition to put it to the jury unless the misdoers are of a flagrant nature. And the man who lives up to the rules closely has his merit marked on his forehead.

At the opening of court at 10.34 Mrs. Burns recalled to the stand for the continuance of the cross-examination. She wore a large green hat of velvet and a long fur coat. She was asked about her dress and her hat, and that with her husband she went by steamer from New York to Charleston, and thence to Jacksonville.

She was asked about her dress and her hat, and that with her husband she went by steamer from New York to Charleston, and thence to Jacksonville.

She denied telling Minnie Foster or the others to make it pleasant for May when she left for Portland, although she admitted hearing Minnie Foster testify. She said she was 45 years old, and said that Mr. Broley was a good-looking man. She was asked what she admitted doing with May Burns in the house, and she said she had seen her there. There were many things she could not remember.

Blaskin Gets Mixed Up. Morris Blaskin was then recalled, and was shown the account book which he had given to the state's attorney. The accounts were kept in the small book in Hebrew. Blaskin selected a page in the book and started reading it, but he was bothered somewhat by it. He was told by the court to read only what was there. Attorney Goodhart asked him to read the items and translate them. He read a line which sounded like Florence Harris, and the book was shown the jury. He also read a list of women's wearing apparel and chamber furnishings, including four boxes of cigarettes, the total amount being $137.75 and he said he did not know where the goods were. He was asked by Major Hall how many Florences there were in the book, and if there were not eight, how many there might be, but the cases the goods were not delivered. The items were discussed in detail, especially two items of towels and an alarm clock. He read a line which sounded like Florence Harris, and the book was shown the jury.

NEW LONDON BOWLERS WIN FROM ARCANUM FIVE. Second of the Preliminary Matches in the Intercity Contest--All Kinds of Scores.

At the Arcanum club of Wednesday evening was rolled the second match in the preliminary series between the Arcanum club and the New London Thames club of New London, with the result that the visitors took the match, getting two out of the three games. The teams were composed of five men each club. There have thus been two matches between the clubs and it is expected that the team playing at home has lost the match each time.

There were all kinds of scores Wednesday evening. Allen of the visitors rolled a total of 250, and 250, and 250. Stevens of the locals went to 569, he being the only one with the exception of Congdon and Caulkins both of whom scored over 500. He also secured the high single, 209, although Congdon and Caulkins both scored over 100 on singles, and by so doing Caulkins secured the number one on the shelf for the visitors, although they won by only five pins. In the second game he rolled 209, and 209, and 209. Stevens was high on singles with 17. The visitors secured one more strike than did the locals, but had six strikes less and 49 pins more on the team totals. The locals had one more missed spare and six less breaks, but they failed to get the pins when needed and had a large number to spare when they did win.

The scoring was by Fox and Richardson, and the umpire, who officiated another account with Addie Burns in the same book.

Addie Burns' Divorced Husband. Clarence Broley of Centerdale, R. I., was called and testified that he married Addie Burns in this city in 1897, the ceremony being performed by William H. Jennings, J. P. They lived together ten years and were divorced in 1907. He keeps a hotel at Centerdale and also manufactures soap. He corroborated in part Addie's story about her visit to Centerdale and the son stating that it was the last of January. She left New York on the Commodore and he left by rail for New Orleans and met her in Jacksonville. There was talk about the low tone in which the witness responded and he insisted that he had not seen her. He did not get, and he was asked to repeat it and he said he told Mr. Hill that he would get a megaphone. Judge Goodhart then sharply rebuked such a remark and warned him not to repeat it again and the witness asked the state's attorney. After a few more questions by Mr. Hill, Attorney Goodhart stated that his side rested.

Witnesses Called in Rebuttal. After a recess of five minutes allowed the attorneys for consultation, Master Gray of New York, formerly New London, was called by Attorney Hill in rebuttal. Mr. Gray stated that he was summoned by the state. He testified for himself alone and wanted to help or harm no one. He told Attorney Goodhart that he had seen May Burns at the Burns and Thayer houses but had not been out with her in New Haven.

Denials by May Burns. In rebuttal, May Burns was called and testified that she did not get a letter from Nellie Whipple which did not tell anyone that she did. She was never at the Jennie Whipple house. POSTOFFICE RATING SYSTEM WORKS WELL HERE.

How the Employees Are Marked for Offenses. Clerks and carriers in the Norwich postoffice have to keep a sharp lookout nowadays to avoid errors and demerits under a new rating system which went into effect on the first of January.

There are hundreds of misdemeanors for which a carrier or clerk is given bad marks. His clothes may be untidy, he may not wipe his feet when he enters the office, and so on. But it is stated that there is no disposition to put it to the jury unless the misdoers are of a flagrant nature.

First on the average speed with which they do their work from day to day; in other words, the quantity of work they turn out.

Second, their accuracy in performing their duties.

Third, their faithfulness in observing the postal regulations and published office rules, including the punctuality and regularity in attendance.

Fourth, their familiarity with the regulations and instructions relating to their work, and in the case of distributors, with their distribution schemes.

Speed is to be reckoned on the amount of work done by the fastest man in the office. He is to be rated 100 and the other clerks and carriers are rated in proportion to the amount of work they do.

Impertinence to superior officer or disrespect is marked 500. Telling a superior officer, 500; falsifying reports, 500.

Falsifying trip report or other time record, 500; giving information to the public concerning the postoffice, 500; regarding mail, 500; returning to patron without authority mail deposited in box or drop, 500; registering on duty, 500; intoxication on duty, 500; reporting for duty under the influence of liquor, 500; smoking in public places, 500; drinking in public places, 500; smoking while on duty, 100; smoking while on duty, 100; smoking while on duty, 100; smoking while on duty, 100.

East Side Items. Extra Session in Intermediate Grade--Doings of the District. John P. Corcoran, who has been home with the grip for some time, has returned to his usual work in a week in a Main street grocery store.

The large elm tree on the Sisson lot at the corner of Hedge avenue and Main street, has been trimmed of several threatening dead branches.

On Saturday morning there was an extra session of the intermediate department at the Bridge district school to make up time that had been allowed out.

After a lengthy illness with grip and influenza, the distinguished Mrs. Chapman of Main street is able to get about again, but not yet to return to work.

William Smith, meat cutter at John J. Potter & Son's store, is laid up with influenza and pneumonia at the base of the thumb of his left hand. It comes from a cut made by a bone two weeks ago. Mr. Smith had to have the thumb lanced on Wednesday.

A Deserved Compliment. The paper office is always interesting. The view point of the different editors shows a wide range of versatility, including the editorial page, especially appreciate the work which Everett G. Hill, editor of the New Haven Register, is putting out day by day on the Register's editorial page.
