SERMONS BY EVANGELIST LUTHER A Race for Life and On The Fence His Topics at First Baptist Church—Series of Services Closes This Week. The speaker then pointed out more specifically what was involved in such a position, a position not at all creditable to one, and utterly indefensible, if not utterly repulsive. It means a halt between keeping sin and giving it up; climbing to some business or method of doing it, or to some sinful pleasure or hobby, rather than give it up for allegiance to and safety in Christ. Yet the Divine Master asks us to give up nothing that is really for our good; and sin is a hard master at best, and when it has "unhinged" its grip, it is a hard master at best. Better give it up. It is also often a halt between Christian or unchristian association, between publicly taking a stand with God's people and uniting with some of their people. His church or trying to live a secret Christian life, which the speaker characterized as an attempt to get the benefits of divine mercy and grace for salvation, without sharing any of the burdens or expenses. A course of action far from commendable. Evangelist Luther evidently believes in the oft-quoted saying of D. L. Moody that it is better to set the people at work than to try to do ten people's work. His sermon, "A Race for Life and On The Fence His Topics at First Baptist Church—Series of Services Closes This Week," was a searching application, to present-day Christians, of the demand which the angels of God made upon Lot to get his family out of Sodom before it was destroyed. Four points were especially emphasized: First, the evident approval of God upon special effort for the salvation of those nearest and dearest to us; second, the sad state of indifference concerning the unsaved, into which God's people often fall, when they ought to be on their feet, with the very deepest anxiety for those over whom doom is hanging, and upon whom it hangs to descend at any moment; third, the heavy responsibility which God lays upon Christians for effort in behalf of all unsaved ones over whom they have or ought to have an influence; fourth, the urgency of effort often demanded: "It is not enough to have simply warned or entreated, but to descend at any moment, if we can, and then most extreme measures must be employed, and the most strenuous effort made, if necessary. This was directly suggested by the angels when they laid hold upon the hands of the imperiled. Their words were: 'What dost thou drag them out of the doomed city.' Mr. Luther closed with an earnest appeal to all unsaved who might be present to at once seek safety, and to like Lot's wife and other members of Lot's family, they should finally be lost.

The evening sermon, the announced theme of which was On The Fence, was based upon the prophet Elijah's appeal to the people to choose between the gods of Baal and the God of Israel. Kings 18:21. Like the Connecticut farmer, said the speaker of course it was a Connecticut farmer, who was asking to be put on the fence, how he was going to vote, replied that he was waiting to see how Squire Jones voted; that is, he was waiting to see how the majority voted. The speaker said that he was waiting to see how Squire Jones voted; that is, he was waiting to see how the majority voted. BUSINESS BEFORE THE SUPERIOR COURT. Two More Divorces Granted—Decision Reserved in Local Case. The case of Frederick Balmore vs. Attorney Jeremiah J. Desmond, administrator of J. Chevalier's estate, which was started in the superior court Thursday, will not be finished until Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The case was finished at 12:30, and Judge Threlkeld, who presided, said this was the only matter considered, court adjourning immediately. The Balmore case is one in which Balmore claims a property interest in a house in LeRoy. He bought the property, he claims, borrowing the money from a man named Chevalier, now dead. The property, which is in Balmore's name, was never deeded to him, but was instead placed in Chevalier's name. He sued Desmond as administrator of Chevalier's estate. Attorney Desmond appeared for himself and C. Hadial Hill representative of Balmore. The witnesses were French Canadians, and a Norwich interpreter was used in getting the testimony. There was some question about the interpreter's testimony, but the court decided in favor of Balmore. Two more couples were parted Saturday when Judge Wheeler of the superior court granted decrees of divorce in the cases of Mrs. M. J. King vs. her husband, and in the case of Mrs. M. J. King vs. her husband. The cases were heard Friday at the short calendar session, decision being reserved.

Stuntz, first assistant secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal church, is to open the interdenominational missionary conference. Justice Hearing. On Saturday morning Justice of the Peace Thomas M. Shields heard the case of Charron vs. Zellinger and reserved his decision. The bill was brought to recover the property not included in the bill of sale. Surprise Party.
