WILLIMANTIC SPRAYING ELMS.

Machine to Get to Work in City's Trees Soon.

The work of spraying the elms owned by the city has not begun yet. The machine has been working on the trees of the American Thread company and lately has been at work in Windham Center.

Superintendent Latham of the street department stated Wednesday morning that it was expected that the men would get to work almost any day now with the machine on the city's trees. It is estimated that 383 trees are owned by the city and therefore the $300 appropriated by the board of aldermen at Monday night's meeting will not be needed, as the original appropriation of $500 will more than cover the cost of the entire job, as it is figured that $1.25 is the cost per tree.

Racket Results from Unfinished Road.
People who have occasion to work in offices and otherwise occupy rooms in the vicinity of the corner of Church and Main streets are greatly disturbed by the noise resulting from traffic on a small stretch of Church street that has been left in a wretched condition by the street department.

A few loads of coarse crushed stone were recently dumped on the piece of street in question and merely leveled off, and the noise occasioned by all traffic thereon and more especially from the contact of heavy automobiles in the late hours of the night is worse than a rolling mill in full blast. It is practically impossible for transients at the Irvin home to leave their windows open and get a wink of sleep and conversation is difficult in the offices of the Murray building even with the windows closed.

FIRE DEPARTMENT

Called Out on Test Alarm—Accident to Engineer Armington.

The fire department was called out Thursday evening on a surprise test alarm. It was a little after seven o'clock when box 34, at the corner of Main and Winter streets, was pulled. The department members imagined the alarm to be a real one for fire and were off on the jump. The test had been arranged by the warden and court of burgesses and no time had been passed around. In the haste to get under way, Engineer F. C. Armington of the General Putnam steamer company received a painful injury.

The harnesses of the horses were unexpectedly slipped from their hangars, a metal part striking Captain Armington and opening up a gash over his right eye. The harness was required to close the wound. Otherwise the practice was a success.

A second call brought the Rough and Ready hose company, No. 3, scurrying down from Christian hill and when they reached their destination the entire department had reported.

The companies spent an hour at practice tests during which the steamer was given a good working out.

KILLED HIS WIFE.

Charge to Be Made Against William B. Roberts of Columbia—Coroner Fisk's Finding at Autopsy.

(Special to The Bulletin.)
Stafford Springs, June 16.—Coroner Robert H. Fisk, returned Tuesday night from Franklin, N. Y., where he went to conclude his investigation of the death of Mrs. Augusta Roberts, wife of William B. Roberts of Columbia. The body was exhumed and an autopsy performed by Dr. Ewan of Rockville and Dr. Squires of Tarrytown.

External Violence.
They found the vital organs all in normal condition and that death was due to hemorrhage of the brain, caused by external violence. The coroner will make his report to State's Attorney Charles Phelps of Rockville and a complaint will be made out charging Roberts with killing his wife.

Roberts had been under the influence of liquor the day his wife's body was found in the road. The two had quarreled and the theory is that he struck her in the back of the head with a stone.

Roberts is now serving a thirty days' sentence in Brooklyn jail, where he was sent from Willimantic last Saturday for intoxication.

PUTNAM

David Clynton, 58, Committed Suicide at Home of Judge L. A. Catlin—Verdict of $1 and Costs for Plaintiff in Assault Case—Early Morning Fire.

David Clynton, 58, committed suicide at the home of Judge Lynde A. Catlin Wednesday morning. A bullet through the brain caused instant death.

The dead man had been a great sufferer with asthma for a long time and it is presumed that despondency resulting from his ailment caused him to commit the rash act. Clynton was a man of mystery, and with him died the secrets of all his past life up to three years ago when he came into the employ of Judge Catlin, who lives just across the line in the town of Woodstock. Clynton has been employed to do general work about the farm. The suspicion is that he came into this vicinity from Providence. He was industrious, a man of good habits, but extremely reticent about affairs concerning himself.

From his conversation it was evident that he had traveled widely in this country and remarks that he made from time to time would indicate the possibility of his having come originally from the southwest. Absolutely nothing is known positively, however, about the man's relatives or friends and there is even a suspicion that his name as here given is fictitious, though it is the only one he was ever known by in this section.

Dr. Joseph Spalding of Woodstock, medical examiner, viewed the body. Clynton's suicide came as a great surprise, there being no circumstances to indicate that he intended terminating his mysterious career.

$1, NOT $2,000.

Kroll brought suit for $2,000. The assault which Freedman charged was alleged to have been committed in the town of Thompson on Dec. 17 of last year.

Freedman, who belongs in Worcester, went to Kroll's farm in Thompson to look at cows, with a view to purchasing them. The assault was said to have occurred in the barn.

After the case was disposed of court adjourned until Friday.
