WHAT IS THE BOOK GOING TO BE
 The question is being asked. What is the 250th anniversary Jubilee book going to be like? It is not going to be like any book ever printed about Norwich, if we have the right conception of it.
 It is going to be an accurate account of the entire celebration gathered by a competent scholar from reliable sources and no pains are to be spared in making it the finest book ever printed about the city and town of Norwich.

It will contain the cream of all the sermons and addresses delivered, the names of all committees, and also the names of hundreds of people who took part in the ceremonies, with portraits, and street scenes and views of the parade and the historical play—the very best pictures which The Bulletin can procure.
 It is expected that this book will have 400 pages, with 50 pages of appropriate portraits and pictures.
 It is to be sold for $2.00 bound in cloth, and for $1.50 bound in leather. There has been received orders for about 150. The Bulletin would like to make an edition of 1,000, but unless there is a quickened demand the edition is likely to be cut down to 500 copies.

The Jubilee book of 1859 was not to be had less than $5 or $7 a copy when wanted this year. This book will be at a premium in the future.
 The Bulletin is planning to have it ready for delivery about the last of December. Those who desire a copy should send their order to The Business Manager of The Bulletin, Norwich, Conn.

THE CITIES THAT DO THINGS.
 The spirit of progress—the enthusiasm which comes of getting together—is moving many American cities to do things. An exchange representing a city recently baptized with this spirit, says now "every new project of public improvement commands immediate attention. Once it would have met with indifference and the promoter would have had a long and weary time of it trying to cultivate that degree of enthusiasm which would make success possible. Today all is different. If one or more citizens come forward with a new scheme for street improvement, a new bridge proposition, a new boulevard, or the securing of an additional factory, every one wants to get together and talk it over and see what can be done to hasten the matter to a speedy consummation."
 This is all right. But the spirit of progress must be sane and safe. There must be something substantial under every forward movement. The city which overlooks the financial balances in its eagerness to advance is not on a solid foundation—it is too much like the dreamer who weaves cobwebs from gossamer silk. A growing debt should not retard a growing city if it is kept in the proper ratio to the advancing value of property; but if it gets out of proportion the greater the advance the greater the distress. A craze is sometimes mistaken for a progressive spirit, but the end reveals that it was only a delusion.

IOWA AND THE FLAG.
 Iowa is a politically noisy state and an agriculturally thrifty state and it must be rather shy on patriotism, if the criticism of a traveler across Iowa on the Fourth is correct. He writes the Des Moines Capital that he traveled across Iowa on the Fourth of July and did not see a dozen flags during the entire day. He reports that when he reached the state line of Illinois the flags began to show up. He also reports that last year he was in the state of Pennsylvania, and he declares that not every family, whether foreign born or not, has the American flag on display. In Pennsylvania, he saw processions of foreigners led by an immense flag, and upon every individual there was a flag.
 The Capital does not attempt to deny this fact, but says:
 "We are inclined to the belief that the flag is taken for granted in this state. Last June there were scores of high school graduates which did not have the American flag on the stage behind the girls in white. Iowa can be accused of nothing but neglect, and Iowa must reform. There should be an American flag in every home and upon national occasions the flag should appear. The flag is a patriotic educator. It is beautiful seven days in the week."
 It would be of interest to know how many of the states "take the flag for granted," whatever that may mean. Let us hope that there are not many. The flag is an educator and to neglect it is a shame. Iowa needs to reform, and reform right away, too!

A NEW JERSEY PRECEDENT.
 Herron, the murderer of Rev. Mr. Hickitt, having become insane, the question arose as to what should be done of him, and the superior court of New Jersey has decided that it is wrong to electrocute an insane man, as the verdict of the court is stayed. The issue being raised whether he should be kept in prison or sent to an insane retreat, it was decided that he should be kept in prison. As the case stands now, he must not be executed while insane, but when sanity returns he shall be electrocuted. This makes a queer precedent. If he was insane when he committed the murder, and who can tell when he first lost his reason, what justice would there be in hanging an irresponsible man when he recovers his normal condition. If he was sane when he committed the murder and when he was tried and sentenced to death, what worse is there in electrocuting him as he is than as he was? Holding a man to hang him when he becomes sane doesn't seem to accord with justice or our religious teachings. If it is right that Herron should be electrocuted, why not execute him, anyway?

WE SHOULD HAVE A CARE.
 Man doesn't like wise counsel simply because he prefers to have his own way. There is a false spirit of freedom at the bottom of most reckless acts and recklessness knows no season and often refuses to recognize opportunity. The Waterbury Republican considers the carelessness of people, with reference to conditions which menace health and may even imperil life, says: "All of us know that in nearly every act we perform we are taking chances with our lives and health, particularly when pleasure seeking. Day after day millions of divers, hikers, ninety per cent. of which on many days are due to the recklessness of 'joyful' individuals, take away members of the human family and increase poverty and suffering among the survivors. Thus the burden is thrown back on the entire body, which has to provide for the carelessness of one instant is not paid perhaps in a generation."
 It makes no difference in what direction one decides to take a risk, it is well to first determine whether folly is father of the thought. If he is, the risk is of a fool, and elsewhere, the fate of fools shows that they are too numerous.

EDITORIAL NOTES.
 Toledo has a romping day for the little ones, and that is the day when the entire city is on the romp.
 The question is again being asked: Does prohibition prohibit? That depends entirely upon the prohibitor.
 We are getting a few perfect days for us, as well as for pleasure just now. We all know how to use them.
 When it comes to a real nice town to summer in, Norwich need not get out of the first rank here in New England.
 A city should guard getting a reputation as a place of good intentions, for that is what Hades is said to be paved with.
 It is these green Georgian melons that can make a Yankee feel meaner than a "reb" ever felt in a northern prison.
 The man who rocks the boat and who doesn't know the gun is loaded, from the classes the joy-riders come from.
 It is well to say pleasant things in warm weather as well as to avoid eating greasy food. Both make for agreeability.
 There is no doubt that an English suttogotte is as savage as a bear, for putting her behind the bars does not tame her.
 Happy thought for today: People who wait their words are careful what they say when the collector calls in these days.
 When President Taft intimates that trick schedules cannot pass him, there appears to be no one ready to doubt the affirmation.
 It is remarkable how states in particular, instead of the country in general, are considered by the congressmen in this tariff fixing business.
 The great lumber states are warning their representatives to beware of silvers if they attempt to slide down the free-lumber plank of the tariff.
 The Toledo Blade feels that "with thirty divers granted in a single day that it is pretty hard to figure out the bustling average of the joy of living."
 Cuba does not seem to recognize that Uncle Sam's mails are closed to the lottery business. But, then, there are other ways to reach American suckers.
 Every man who thinks that he is making footprints on the sands of time is not; but Taft appears to be letting the future know that he wears number nines.
 Norwich planned to get a good deal of fun out of September, and since things have changed it should not forget that there is just as much fun in September as ever.
 The western judge who ordered every man to be the head of his own household knows the disadvantage of not being. A great many men are simply the figureheads.
 WHAT THE PAPERS SAY.
 For a Tax on Weapons.
 Representative Sisson of Mississippi is a congressman with a well developed sense of consistency. He evidently appreciates the absurdity, almost grotesque, of passing laws punishing people for carrying concealed weapons and at the same time leaving the manufacture and sale free and unhampered. To correct in some degree this weakness, he has introduced a bill to tax every deadly weapon and every cartridge made.—Bristol Press.

THE BULLETIN'S DAILY STORY RETRIBUTION
 "Beg pardon, sir."
 Paul Everleigh straightened himself against the iron railing and an angry retort rose to his lips. A heavy fog hung like a pall over the city, the streets were broad and it seemed more than a mere coincidence that the two men should collide with such disastrous results to Everleigh's temper.
 The man stood aside evidently enjoying in a quiet way the other's discomfort, but on Everleigh's recovery, he had just possession and peering into the other's countenance, the stranger hastily pulled his hat over his face and hurried away.
 For an instant Everleigh stood undecided whether to follow the man or not, for the stranger's evident desire to get away increased his suspicion, and although the detective had caught but a fleeting glimpse of the other's face, that glimpse had awakened a memory long since forgotten, and he felt that some time he had been acquainted in some way with the stranger.
 His heart beat with a deep thought, he continued on his way, and reached his home without having solved the problem. But scarcely had he inserted the key in the lock when a grim smile lit up his face. "I knew I would remember," he said triumphantly, stepping into his luxurious library. The room was a quiet room with its Oriental hangings and softly shaded lights was a welcome contrast to the disagreeable, foggy night out of which he had just come, and sinking into the big chair he pulled his hat back to the day that he captured John Kent, the coolest most daring burglar that ever baffled the police and successfully eluded their most strenuous efforts. Even now the detective could feel a touch of the triumph he felt the day he landed his man handcuffed in the station house. It was a fine piece of detective work and Everleigh had received the commendation of his chief as well as an important promotion.
 But John Kent was not to be disposed of so easily. As Everleigh was leaving him in the hands of the proper officials, Kent touched him slightly and said, "I will be back in a couple of days, Everleigh," he said in a low, threatening voice, "but some day I'll pay you back with interest." And Everleigh had a sinking feeling that the promise of the other and promptly forgotten all about it.
 That Kent had been sentenced to a long term of imprisonment, Everleigh afterwards heard, but the sense of triumph and the entire affair did not concern him, and the entire affair had passed from his memory. But that it was John Kent he had passed on the street, he was certain, and he found himself idly wondering if he would political capital of the matter. They were disappointed in their efforts.

 "The people are anxious to see and hear the chief magistrate. It is in response to insistent requests, and invitations that he is starting on a tour of the west and south. His predecessor was allowed a traveling fund and there is no reason why Mr. Taft should be discriminated against.—Waterbury Republican.
 Connecticut Not Poor.
 Connecticut is not a poor state. Tax Commissioner Corbin has so proved. He finds that the total net property in Connecticut is $222,071,502. The 168,547 dwelling houses are worth $408,957,544, an average of $2,430. The land area is 3,717,718 acres and at $11,286,950, or a value of $3 an acre.
 Mercantile and manufacturing establishments number 17,130, valued at $182,068,470.
 There are 75,779 horses and mules in the state, worth $4,489,159, and the total value of wagons, automobiles and bicycles is given as $106,540.
 Of neat cattle there are 149,253 head, worth $2,313,956.
 The town authorities returned lists of taxable property of an aggregate value of $770,599,592, but the board of equalization increased the valuation by $151,472,000 for purposes of taxation.—New Haven Leader.
 After Ten Years.
 The state encampment of the Spanish War Veterans this year, which was held in this city on Saturday, is important as marking the tenth anniversary of the conclusion of the conflict with Spain. Connecticut showed her patriotism in the struggle against Spain in the union which the call for volunteers for the Spanish war was issued, and those from that state who entered the army at that time show an excellent spirit in keeping alive the memories of those exciting days. While the volunteer troops did not have much to do, yet they showed their patriotism, and were with us to the last man, if necessary. We have had ten years of peace, and may it be a long, long time before it will be necessary again for the citizens of any state to call for volunteers to rush to the defense of the country.—New Haven Palladium.
 Fall of a Historic Tree.
 Vancouver's historic old Balm of Gilead tree, to which Lewis and Clark are said to have tied their canoe in 1805, and which marked the landing point of the Hudson Bay company of fur traders in 1824, fell a victim to the waters of the Columbia river the other afternoon.
 This old tree, which stood on the bank of the river at the foot of Main street, was the starting point for all early surveys in Clark county and the western portion of Washington state. It marked the point where the city limits joined the military reservation. The tree was held in veneration by Vancouver men who took an interest in matters of historic interest.
 The tree was about five feet in diameter at its base, and its trunk, being fully 30 feet across at its crown. A copper spike is said to have been driven into the tree, and it was from this point all surveys began. The spike is now grown over, but it is likely that it will be chopped out and kept in the archives of the city.—Vancouver Correspondence Portland Oregonian.
 A Man at Eighty.
 Among the octogenarians of this section of the state, there are a few who can talk interestingly of olden times as Charles Schmoeyer, veteran of the Army of the Potomac, iron ore miner, carpenter and farmer, of this borough. He is a hale, hearty man, going to the dogs, sure, on account of the young people disliking to work, sleeping little and spending too much money.
 Mr. Schmoeyer was a giant in his younger days, both in stature and in strength. He handled 300 pound barrels of sugar and hoisted a three-hundred pound bag of grain over his head for his prodigious strength to lift a barrel of cider to his knees and enjoy a draught out of the bung hole.
 Mr. Schmoeyer says: "Those were good old days. Men were healthy and strong then. We had both better and style and fashions, either for us attended church and Sunday school barefooted, without coats, collars or ties. That was a better time. A bottle of boys got 5 cents spending money and at vendues, or public sales, only 3 cents; but we enjoyed that little more than the boys nowadays do."
 "No judgment notes in those days," oh, no. The people were honest then, and a little scratch on a beam or upon the chimney was enough. Children get big too quick now, and rule their parents, whereas in my days it was nothing for a 21 year old son to be whipped by his father. Yes, the world is growing worse, and the trouble lies with the young people."—Philadelphia Record.

 Still Something to Wear.
 "Cousin Sereno" appears to be convinced that the foundations of our government will crumble unless the tariff on gloves and hosiery is increased. Let us be thankful that he has never taken more than a friendly interest in pajamas.—Record-Herald.
 His Conscience.
 A Pennsylvania undertaker has been surprised by the receipt of a check from a man who had owed him an account for several years. Maybe the man is getting ready to call on his old creditor for professional services.—Buffalo Express.

 You cannot afford to grow old. In these days of strenuous competition it is necessary to maintain, as long as possible, your youthful appearance. It is impossible to do this without retaining a luxuriant growth of hair.
 The presence of Dandruff indicates the presence of a burrowing germ which lives and thrives on the roots of the hair until it causes total baldness.
 Sewing's Hairdye is the only known destroyer of this pest, and it is as effective as it is delightful to use. Hairdye makes an elegant hair dressing as well as Dandruff Cure.
 Accept no substitute—there is none. Sold by leading druggists. Send for a sample for example to The Hairdye Co., Detroit, Mich.

Her Apple Pig "Got" Him.
 "Make your pie crust rich, also your apples thin, put in plenty of them and use lots of sugar," said Mrs. F. W. Seymour, the 67 year old bride of Justice of the Peace Seymour, aged 75, of Maywood.
 Mrs. Seymour won the heart, hand and fortune of her husband by making him luxurious pies, and she gave a detailed recipe for the benefit of other widows who might wish to use the same sort of inducement.
 "Her apple pie got me," said Justice Seymour. "I always did like apple pie, but I never got real apple pie until I ate her apple pie."—Chicago Dispatch to New York World.
