AT BROADWAY THEATER.

What a chance is here for the playwright to produce a play that will meet the approval of the theatergoers, in writing on this famous maximum. And the fact that the famous actor, Lionel Sully, presents this delightful play for over two years throughout this country, is proof positive that Mr. Sherwood, the author of the play, has succeeded in bringing forth a play that admirably teaches the precepts of "The Golden Rule." To those that have seen this unique play it will be a welcome announcement that the Gage Stock company is to present it, and all are assured of witnessing a high class performance of the same. The Golden Rule will be the offering on next Monday night.

THE AUDITORIUM.

To keep one good vaudeville bill following another is the present policy of the management of the Auditorium, and after feeling the public's pulse have prescribed a comedy bill for the coming week.
Miller and Russell will start the big laugh side splitting comedy act, The Lunatic and the Girl. This is a most pretentious and original comedy act, and scenery and effects. The complications which arise from each of the characters mistaking the other for inmates of an insane asylum are ridiculous in the extreme.
A versatile instrumentalist, Al Allen, the "Master" renders a varied musical entertainment, mastering several entirely different instruments in the short space of fourteen minutes.
Wilson and Miles will keep the audience in good humor with "a bunch of nonsense" which includes comedy singing, dancing and talking.
Gordon and Keys, coming direct from the Keith & Pactor circuit, present an act of genuine ducky humor, Sam Gordon's eccentric dancing is in a class by itself while Emma Keys is possessed of a melodious voice and pleasing personality.
The remainder of next week's programme of which more will be said later is up to the excellent standard set by this house.

AT BROADWAY THEATER.

Charlotte Temple.

Modistes of all the fashion centers have been trying for some seasons past to introduce the styles of the revolutionary period. Do you want to see these styles exactly duplicated? Then go to the Broadway theater this afternoon or evening. Charlotte Temple will be produced for the first time in this city. The action of the true story upon which this play is based took place during the revolutionary and when the management decided to produce the piece in that period, they also decided to be as authentic as possible in all their details with this idea in mind, hunted up the descendants of the original Charlotte Temple, who have always lived in England. Through the kind courtesy of these people, when located, valuable information was received. The costumes used are almost exact duplicates of those worn by the original Charlotte Temple and the other characters and the scenes depicted are painted copies of the actual neighborhood treated of.

BREED THEATER.
