PLAINFIELD

A Tribute to Mrs. Martha M. Barber. Mr. Editor: Allow me space in the columns of your paper to say just a few words about the late Mattie M. Barber who passed beyond the veil at Backus hospital last Monday. She was one of nature's noblemen, no better ever having lived on this earth.

There are few persons who came in contact with the dear woman who have better reasons to know her at heart than myself, although I am only one of hundreds who were acquainted with her and knew of her many quiet good deeds. Her entire life appeared to be for others. During my five years of illness she was a constant visitor driving several miles to bring me some little loving token, flowers or other mark of kindness, no matter what kind of weather she never neglected these little loving acts. All through the towns of Plainfield, Canterbury and Griswold can be found poor, needy and sick, who feel just as I do about the kind one who has gone to join her loved ones and rest from worldly cares.

Mostly shaft of marble may mark her resting place, no pomp and gorgeous gatherings around her bier, but monuments immortal she builded while CHESTNUT HILL. Town Now Owns the Piano—Richard O. Lyman of Hartford Surprised—Boston Man's Gift to School.

The amount required for the piano recently placed in Yeomans' hall having been received, the instrument is now the property of the town. This money was derived from various sources, the different orders, societies and clubs assisting as well as private subscriptions. The largest contribution was made by the Success club, which generously donated $50 toward the enterprise. Especial credit is due Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Inham for the energetic manner in which they overcame all opposition and pushed the matter to a successful and harmonious conclusion.

Mrs. Carrie Pendleton of Yantic has been the guest of Miss Annie G. Loomis for a few days.

Richard O. Lyman of East Hartford and Herbert D. Lyman of Westminster were with the family of William A. Lyman over Sunday. On Saturday evening the former was pleasantly surprised by thirty of his young friends and former associates, accompanied by the Columbia band, of which Mr. Lyman was formerly a member. Although completely surprised, he was soon himself again and ready to do his share toward making the gathering an enjoyable one. There were instrumental music and gay and merry games, after which a delightful lunch of cake, furnished by the ladies of the party, and coffee, grapes, etc., provided by Mr. and Mrs. William A. Lyman, were served.

Guy Norman of Boston, a wealthy member of the Liberty club, while out hunting some time since in the neighborhood of Tobacco street, chanced to enter the schoolhouse of that district and was struck by its noticeable lack of equipment. A few days later the school was the recipient of a good sized express package containing many articles of use to both teacher and pupils.

"Makes Cooking Easy" C. O. Murphy, Norwich. He Worked. Judge John G. Horner of Mount Holly, who is a warm admirer of the great collegiate game, told a story of a farmer whose son was set one of the big academy teams. The boy, according to the judge, was sent to college by his indignant father, and on making the first eleven sent word to the paternal relative to come and see him play.

The farmer complied, and for an hour sat and watched the husky youth pick up several tons of humanity and throw it all over the gridiron. The more the son struggled the more the father stared, and one of the professors went over to him. "You seem to marvel at your son's wonderful performance," remarked the professor. "I kind of 'kalkulate' that I do," replied the father. "You fellows down at this college he got me beat like a bay mule pacin' agin an automobile." "In what way?" asked the professor. "Why, jes look at him," returned the old man, "all the coatin', cusin' and drivin' that I knowed how ter do couldn't make him work as hard as that down on their farm."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Opening Up Nevada. Nevada has passed the agebrush stage of life and merged into the important class of producers. Any department of the interior is making estimates and plans looking toward the opening of the Pyramid Indian reservation for settlement and the establishment of an immense irrigation project, using Pyramid lake as a storage reservoir. Secretary Hallinger's recent visit in Reno resulted in the perfection of certain plans that have been under consideration with respect to reclamation work. The land embraced within the reservation is for the most part arid, but will become fertile with slight irrigation. There are more than 200,000 acres said to be rich. This in itself is an empire, and once thrown open will naturally attract thousands of homeseekers and mining enthusiasts. Nevada is coming into her own.—Anaconda Standard.

Cold Comfort from Africa. Peary's cablegram to Roosevelt is not likely to be received with much enthusiasm. The polar business has through game killing into the shade and has reduced the value of literature. —Philadelphia Inquirer.

Modesty of Pennsylvania. Now that the Quay statue is in its appropriate place in the new statehouse, Pennsylvania seems a trifle backward in letting the world to step forward and admire it.—Chicago Tribune.
