THE CAT DID THE TRICK.

At Broadway Theater Tonight.
Mr. Wilder is a bright, nervous little fellow, whose face betokens the restless activity of his mind. His twinkling brown eyes are never still, and whatever he says is accompanied by illustrative gestures and grimaces. He is very cordial in his manner, a five minutes acquaintance with him being a sufficient explanation of the fact that he numbers his friends among the can, who is dying of thirst, on the arid plains, and takes him to her home until he recovers. Although he is a married man, he keeps the fact from her, and makes desperate love to her, she discarding her old lover for the new. The hate in the heart of her discarded lover prompts him to shoot the newcomer, but upon seeing the great apparent love for each other, decided to give up his claim and leave the country. As the happy pair start off for a cross country ride, the American drops a note that he has secreted in his hat, which is destined to reach a friend of his, and tells of the fool that he is making of the girl. This being found by the unselfish lover, stirs all the malice in his heart, and a fierce chase is the result, in which the American barely escapes with his life, and the two Mexican lovers are reunited.

This is but one of the many features, and the whole bill is most excellent. Miss Woicott is making the hit of the season with her splendid songs, which are daily serving to increase the already large attendance.

Vermont Apple Farm.

With his crop of apples for this year sold for $17,000, one farmer at Charlott, Vt., reads the accounts of western apple fevers with complacency. He has only a 100-acre farm. Some of that is not set to apple trees. He has employed 60 men this fall picking the 5,000 barrels of apples. Thousands of people have ridden to Charlott in the past few weeks to see the immense orchards of Charles T. Holmes there, near the shore of Lake Champlain, and it is a place of beauty that improves the scenery about the lake. Still, it is only an ordinary farm. The elder Holmes began planting apple trees 40 years ago, and his descendants have been an income for years. Each tree is attended to and fertilized as though it were a prize bush. Men from the west have offered Mr. Holmes $50,000 for that farm. To sell Holmes $50,000 for that farm is to sell New England would be much richer if all the farms were bearing that class in value because of definite work in production.—Worcester Telegram.

FOETRY.
THE HOMETEAD.
In the high field I used to know
Where—least the violets grow
I found thee, faithful to the rock,
The fragrances of the azure flock.
The sun-warmed ground, the soft salt
air,
Seemed still of boyhood lingering there;
The sea-blown homestead of my race—
What feelings filled the sacred place!
I found in tears 'tis memory gives
The immortal part of my man lives;
And every flower I ponder on
Grows in a world of beauty gone.
Full many a spring of buried bloom
From these faint violets sheds perfume;
And all the summer of the sun
My love remembers shines as one.
Ye hills, ye woods my boyhood knew,
Be now my manhood dear to you!
And fairer may I yet behold
Year after year, as I grow old —George E. Woodberry.

SONG OF THE RIVETER.
Hip! Hip!—a cheer
For the riveter
As he climbs the column top,
And squats beside the beam beside,
And lets his hammer pop.
The rivets hot
From the fiery pot
He grabs as they cleave the air;
Then jabs the shanks in the holes and yanks
The lever wide for fair.
Then it's bang, bang, bang,
As the pistons clang,
And the blows fall fierce and fast.
That blotch, dull red, is a rivet head—
And he's shutting off the blast.

MUCH IN LITTLE
The first census of Bankok City has just been completed. The total population is returned at 625,675.
Great Britain's foreign trade in nine months of the present year has increased 41-2 per cent. Imports have risen $7,290,000 and exports $5,889,000.

There are three women among the nominees for the next Norwegian parliament. One was chosen by the liberals and two by the socialists.
A new railway station to cost $800,000 is being built at La Rochelle, France, which has a population of only 35,000. It is the second largest fishing port in France, however.

In order to augment the facilities and value of the Antung-Mukden railway, the Japanese government has in view the construction of a fine harbor at the mouth of the Yalu river.
Six bottles of Danish brandy were discovered in the huge accordion of a wandering minstrel who had regularly traveled between Denmark and Sweden during the Swedish strike, when the sale of alcohol was prohibited.
A number of oil motor boats ordered from the Osaka Iron works by the residency general in Korea have been completed and are to be sent to Kure to be fitted with guns. The boats are to be used to guard the Korean coast.
Theaters in London and all over England are complaining of small receipts and lay the trouble to the moving picture shows, which are more popular and merge from a black-lined tent to the theater in Piccadilly, where there are music and tea.
Asbestos houses are much used in Australia, says Popular Mechanics. It is stated that they are not only fire-proof, but impervious to water, unaffected by heat or cold, and of high insulating properties. Still another favorable feature is the fact that it is not attacked by white ants or other insects that abound in southern countries.
That Edison is as fertile as ever in suggestions appears in his proposal that the East River, New York, be filled in and its waters provided with a new channel dug across Long Island at a point farther east. Good authorities pronounce the scheme by no means chimerical. The real estate value of the present site of the river would be almost beyond calculation.
