Norwich, Colchester and Hartford Traction Co.

Issue of 4,000 Shares of the Preferred Stock of the Trolley Road has been Authorized, Half of which has been Sold—Building of the Line is Assured and Work will Start this Spring—Experts Declare It is a Choice Charter.

A meeting of the directors of the Norwich, Colchester & Hartford Traction company was held at the office of Brown & Potts on Monday, at which time an issue of 4,000 shares of the preferred capital stock of the company was authorized. There has been sold over half this amount and the building of the road is assured, and it is expected that dirt will be laying the coming spring, as the company intends to get at work on it as soon as possible. Engineer Kroyer has made all his survey and work can start today as far as his part of it is concerned.

Probable few realize the importance of this line to Norwich, Hartford and the intervening territory. There is between this city and Hartford a triangular section of the state containing 750 square miles, or two-thirds the size of the state of Rhode Island, of virgin soil. There are no modern methods of transportation and 75,000 people will be served by the building of this road. It is a queer situation that right in the heart of New England lying between two large business centers, Norwich and Hartford, that there should be a section of country of this size without modern transportation service.

From 2,000 to 6,000. From Colchester the route carries it through North Westchester to Marlboro, along Marlboro lake into the town of Glassboro. In this town it passes through the villages of East Glassboro, Nipic, Addison and Millstown, going then into the town of Hartford, and through Burnside Corners into the center of Hartford.

It will not be built into an undeveloped territory, expecting business to follow the road, but through a country already teeming with business and people anxiously awaiting trolley service. The famous Black Lake and Salmon rivers, on which many mills are already in operation, and many more power sites ready to be utilized as soon as transportation is afforded, are all directly accommodated by this line, and Norwich and Hartford will be put in neighborly relation by shortening the present traveling distance between the two cities. The present time of travel one-third. The merchants and all business interests of Norwich will be put in hourly communication with thousands of people from

WEDDING. GOODMAN-SOLOMON.

With great attendance many from out of town attending the marriage of Morris L. Goodman of Concord, N.
