OBITUARY.

Mrs. George D. Whittlesey (Loomis) Whittlesey died Thursday after a lingering illness at her residence, 293 Hempstead street, New London. Death, which was due to a general breakdown, came about 3:30 Thursday morning. Mrs. Whittlesey had been ill about four months and has been confined to her home for several weeks. Some weeks ago her condition became such that the end was simply a question of time. She was 69 years old.

She was the widow of George D. Whittlesey, who was postmaster at New London during the first Cleveland administration. Mrs. Whittlesey was the daughter of the late Francis B. and Betsey Ingham Loomis. Her father was at one time lieutenant governor of the state, in 1877 and 1878. She was of lovable disposition, kind-hearted and charitable.

Mrs. Whittlesey was a lifelong resident of New London and a member of St. James' Episcopal church. Recently a memorial window in memory of her husband was given the church by Mrs. Whittlesey. It was dedicated Easter Sunday and Mrs. Whittlesey was unable to be present. She died without seeing the window.

OPENING OF ELKS' BAZAAR

Olympic Hall Crowded for the First Night—Mayor Lippitt Makes Address—Programme Well Presented and Success Stands Out Over Entire Affair.

Opening a four-day bazaar in Olympic hall, with an attendance of 1,400 people, Norwich belonged to the Elks on Thursday night, and a host of friends of Norwich looked on. The 430 showed by their patronage their interest in the object for which the bazaar is conducted—the furnishing of their new home on Main street next to the postoffice. Such an auspicious beginning seemed to indicate a grand success for the bazaar and a most satisfactory return that will be a big help to realizing their ideal of making their new home unequalled in the state.

Fine Parade. The evening began in a blaze of red fire as the Elks paraded from their lodge room in Pythian hall at 8 o'clock, led by Tubbs' band and accompanied by a dozen automobiles, as well as a large number of spectators. The parade was given away at the bazaar. Nearly a hundred men were in the line which was led by M. B. Ring's automobile.

Countermarching at the bridge, they returned along Main and West Main streets to Thomas square and thence countermarching to the hall in Water street.

Automobile Section. In the first machine in the automobile section, which was driven by Louis L. Gowd, was Exalted Ruler Lippitt, with Exalted Ruler Frank G. Aubrey and Judge N. J. Ayling, P. E. R. The following had machines in the parade: George A. Allen, Leo Kronig, L. B. Brockett, L. J. Willis, Imperial garage and several from the A. C. Swan Co. garage. All along the parade the merchants responded to the request of the Elks and had their stores lighted up.

In the hall, which was packed to standing room only, Exalted Ruler Aubrey opened the programme by introducing Mayor Lippitt, to whom was assigned the privilege of formally opening the bazaar. Exalted Ruler Aubrey thanked the public for its patronage, the merchants for their cooperation through the souvenir programme and decorations, all helping the cause in its purpose of making their new home one of the show places of the city.

Mayor Lippitt Opens Bazaar. Mayor Lippitt felicitously greeted the big crowd present, and congratulated the Elks upon the state of affairs which they were to occupy, which he recalled had once been the home of John F. Slater, and he was glad to know that it was to be kept in its aristocratic beauty. He said that he wanted every citizen to have a hand
