BREED THEATER.

"Muggsy's First Sweetheart," "Screaming Biography," Comedy.
A fascinating comedy reel of motion pictures is one of the great attractions at the Breed theater this week, and is entitled "Muggsy's First Sweetheart," and enacted by the popular Muggsy company. This delightful little episode depicts the first love affair of an interesting little fellow named Muggsy, who meets a pretty little girl who courts her home. Before leaving, he begs the privilege of calling again, which he is permitted to do. Meantime the faint and little girl has fully vanished one of the parlor chairs, and because he has dared to do the work in the dining room, the wife is much annoyed, and the chair is placed in the parlor again. Muggsy arrives after much manuevering and primping and is shown into the parlor, and as might be expected, the vanished chair is the only one that looks good to him, and he promptly takes a seat in it, and becomes much attached thereto. In the effort to remove himself from the chair, a portion of the seat of the new trousers, and great is his humility. There are several other side-splitting episodes in the play.

The thrilling war story of "After Many Years" interests all, and the climax is as thrilling and sensational as any of the season.
Mr. Plouf sings the novelty song, "Die He Run and the Novelty Song," and the Banks of the Old Mill Stream, both of which have handsome slides.

The Manly Art.
Appropos of the recent prize-fight, the signed editorial in the Outlook by Theodore Roosevelt praising the manly art of boxing and at the same time condemning the brutality of the prize-fight, throws another sidelight on a much-discussed topic.

Colonel Roosevelt tells how he, himself, in his early days derived much benefit from boxing contests, although not always with success over his opponent, and how he as police commissioner encouraged this form of exercise and recreation among the policemen and firemen of New York, and later, as president, on the soldiers and sailors. The former president confesses not only to admiration of, but to friendship with, a number of professional boxers and heroes of the prize-fing. He says that his eyes when he decries the sordid and brutal conditions that have come to surround these pugilistic bouts with prize money aggregating hundreds of thousands of dollars divided almost equally between winner and loser, and the additional temptation offered by the prospect of motion picture royalties. The manly art as practiced by professional prizefighters has degenerated so as to disgust everyone and to forfeit the good opinion even of those disposed to encourage wholesome tests of courage, strength and endurance.—Omaha Bee.

His Own Executor.
Dr. D. K. Pearsons, past 90 and afflicted with rheumatism, will soon leave his house and spend the rest of his life in a sanitarium. He has given six million dollars to twenty-nine small colleges, and on his next birthday, he will make his last gift. "I will make no more presents until my birthday," he says. "Then I will dispose of everything. For twenty-four years I have lived in the old mansion here. Twenty-one of those years I have been giving. Now I have promised $500,000 additional is raised. That one debt I must meet next April. And there are other conditional debts. When my house is sold and the debts met I shall have been my own executor and shall have closed the estate entirely. There will be no disputes after I am gone. That is what I want to be sure of."

Impressive Beyond Precedent.
The lesson involved for the people of Lawrence is impressive beyond any precedent there was in this state. The call on honest citizens there to promote and to insist upon a municipal housecleaning is of the clarion sort, for it involves the good name and the honor of a community. It is a fine and prosperous in a business way. There is the handicap of a varied and large population of foreign birth and new to our democracy, but by so much is the work of educating these people and guiding the common interests the more important and compelling. The disgrace of Lawrence should also be her inspiration to the people of this genuine civic spirit.—Springfield Republican.

An Old Tradition Destroyed.

President Taft has once more ventured outside our national borders without invoking any dreadful consequences. Mr. Roosevelt, it will be remembered, went to Panama during his term of office. Mr. Taft followed this example, between the time of his election and inauguration; and later crossed the Mexican boundary to exchange courtesies with President Diaz. Now, in journeying to Eastport, Me., by water, he has penetrated the jurisdiction of Canada as our little frontier settlement is almost entirely surrounded by King George's islands. But what of it? What harm would ensue if he were to continue on to St. John, Yarmouth, and Halifax? Indeed, there is something to be said in favor of such an extension of his midsummer cruise. He would be received in any British port he might visit with extreme cordiality, and the result could not fail to be the wholesome stimulation of our international friendship.—Providence Journal.

An Engineer 58 Years.

Michael Kirby, engineer, for 58 years in the employ of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, has voluntarily left his locomotive cab and gone on to the retired list. Mr. Kirby claims to be the only person living who struck one of the blows which drove the gold spike in the cross tie at Rosey's Rock, W. Va., on Christmas eve, 1852, marking the completion of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad to the Ohio river at Wheeling and the establishment of the first trunk line on the American continent.

Thayer's Flippancy Serves Wisdom.

"There's a divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them how we will," and even this jester Thayer promotes the end of wisdom, despite himself. He does not raise himself in esteem by his flippancy about the senatorship. Even if a democratic senator were a possibility, he makes himself more impossible every time he speaks. Nevertheless he is helping a good cause. For even the jest may make the tickled think, when the laugh has died and there is left a credit to Connecticut, the reflection may be, that it is possible thus to jest about its highest representation at Washington?—New Haven Register.
