SUDDEN DEATH OF JOHN EXLEY.

Dropped Dead Just After Rising On Sunday Morning—Heart Disease the Cause—Had Been Sick Since Thursday.

Few had known of the sickness of John Exley, who has peddled newspapers, popcorn and peanuts for years around the streets of this city, so that the news of his sudden death on Sunday morning was a great surprise. Since last Thursday he had been at the almshouse, and as he arose Sunday morning about 5 o'clock and started to cross the room he dropped dead from heart disease.

"John," as he had been known to everyone in the city for forty to fifty years, was taken sick Thursday with indications of heart trouble, being discovered late in the afternoon by James Ellis, sitting on the steps of the Shields building on Bath street, with his head in his hands. When John said he was feeling bad and needed something to eat, he took a sandwich from his restaurant and set food before him but he took only a bite or two of bread before he lay down on a barrel and said he felt worse.

Errol C. Lillibridge was interested in the sick man and assisted in getting him to the almshouse, where he was communicating with the first selectman. Medicine for the sick man was prescribed by Dr. Harper and he was later taken to the almshouse by James B. Chapman, who drove in with a team.

Friday night John grew worse, and Dr. J. J. Donohue was called. He did what he could for John but told Superintendent Chapman that the sick man had not long to live. After his death the body was removed to the morgue of Undertaker Gager. An effort was made to revive him but without success.

Crippled in one leg and using a cane to help in walking, John had lived in the streets of the city for years and was well known to many of the city's residents.

THE NEW BALLOT LAW.

Attorney General Holcomb Instructs Secretary of State on its Provisions.

Attorney General Marcus H. Holcomb has replied to a letter from the secretary of state asking if the new ballot law meant that the secretary must prepare and forward the proper number of ballots for each district in each town in the state, numbered from one upward and bearing the imprint of each district, which would necessitate having official knowledge of the number of voters in each district as well as in the towns at large.

In reply the attorney general quoted Section 2 of Chapter 250 of the Public Acts of 1909, which treats each voting precinct, in its entirety, as a unit, requiring a separate ballot, and an endorsement designating the particular voting district for which the ballot is prepared. He also called attention to Section 6, requiring ballots to be sealed in packages with the number of the town, borough or voting district for which they are intended marked on the outside of the wrapper; also he called attention to Section 7, providing that the ballots might not all be the same in all the voting precincts of the same town, but that the numbering of the ballots must be for each voting district with stubs attached numbered consecutively in increasing numerical order.
