The Coming Grain Belt. From Cincinnati comes news that one of the features of the Ohio valley exposition, to be held in that city, will be a series of lectures upon southern resources, wherein the lecturer will undertake to show that the "mangled grammar" will some time be removed to the south.

Fanciful as this may seem to those of our northern neighbors who are unacquainted with the present-day conditions in this section, the lecturer will be able to bolster up his theory by plausible and rather convincing facts and figures.

The boll weevil will figure in his argument, we are told, as one of the principal agencies in the prophesied evolution. Certainly that troublesome immigrant has powerfully helped the crop diversification campaign, bringing many converts into the diversification camp.

Moreover, experimentation with the standard grain has been surprisingly successful, by most accounts. Improved farming methods have helped corn culture throughout the southern states, so that both the yield and the acreage are increasing rapidly.

It is said that southern farmers are also getting satisfactory yields of oats. As for wheat, the Mississippi farmers who made trial of that crop last fall are reported well satisfied with results, and within the last few days the organization of what might be termed "wheat-growing clubs" has been reported from two Mississippi counties.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Grocer's Knew. The grocer's first question to the man who had asked him to weigh a flatiron, a pair of riding boots, a French novel and a jar of ground coffee at the same time seemed irrelevant.

"Boy or girl?" said he.

"Girl," said the man.

"Then the grocer lumped the miscellaneous assortment into the scales and said $ 4 points.

"Happens every little while down here where not many people have scales of their own," he explained.

"They want to weigh the baby the minute it arrives, so they balance it with a sand and sand that exactly tip the beam; then the next day they weigh the things and find out baby's weight."
