OLD GRIFFING SILVER

Bought by Eager Collectors at Sale of Antiques in Guilford.

A sale of unusual interest to lovers of the antique was held last week in Guilford at the house of Mrs. Eva B. Leete, a collector of antiques. This was the sale of the Griffing silver, the last representative of the Griffing family, Mrs. Sarah Brown Cone, of Stockbridge, Mass., died a few months ago and the sale was in the course of settlement of the estate.

Mrs. Cone was the great-granddaughter of Jasper Griffing, who came from Long Island in 1776 and purchased the famous "Old Stone House" in Guilford, which is now the Henry Whitfield State Historical museum. Jasper Griffing's son, Nathaniel, succeeded to the ownership, 1800-1845.

When it passed to the latter's daughter, Mrs. Henry H. Chittenden, and at last to her daughter, Mrs. Cone, who in 1900 sold the ancient dwelling to the state. It had been owned by the Griffing family 125 years.

Prominent among the silver pieces was a porringer dating back to about 1725, when it was owned by Baenabes Tull of Southold, L. I. This porringer went for a price never before paid for a similar article, save one, the porringer of Paul Revere. The silver tankard of Jasper Griffing, 1781, was also in great favor.

Great interest was shown in a dainty pair of sugar tongs and an English creamer, the latter of which is to go to San Francisco. These articles were once the property of Rachel Lee before she became the bride of Jasper Griffing (about 1781). Riding into New Haven on a pillow behind the saddle of her lover, Rachel Lee brought the creamer and sugar tongs with money she had earned by making buttonholes on greatcoats, as overcoats were then termed.

A rattail tablespoon, 1645, made by John Cone, one of the earliest silver makers in this country, was a great attraction. This spoon bears the initials of the owner of each generation event the second and perhaps the third.

Gives Up New York State.

The republican party in New York has been disintegrated and is to be further disintegrated to the point that in no way can it carry the state. If the threatened overdose of populism is injected at Saratoga, death for the present will be instant. If those who stand by the traditions and principles that for 60 years commanded the respect of intelligent voters have been convention, the struggle will be longer, but futile, at the close. The black cloud of dust and winds which ascends by day and by night from Oyster Bay and the Hudson, is a befuddled voter enough to defeat this year even the best nominations that genuine republican voters of New York can name. New York has been thrown away, and for what?—Worcester Telegram.
