

INTOLERABLE ITCHING

"Two years ago some form of humor appeared on my scalp. The beginning was a slight itching, but it grew steadily worse until, when I combed my hair, the scalp became raw. Most of the time there was an intolerable itching, in a painful, burning way. Cooling my hair was positive torture. My hair was long and tangled terribly because of the blood and scales. Over half my hair fell out and I was in despair, really afraid of becoming totally bald. After being asleep a short time, that awful stinging pain would commence and then I would wake up nearly wild with the torture. I now decided to order a set of Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills. I used them for perhaps six weeks, then left off, as the disease seemed to be eradicated. But toward spring, eighteen months ago, there was a slight return of the scalp humor. I commenced the Cuticura treatment at once, so had very little trouble. Since then I have had no scalp trouble of any kind and had it not been for Cuticura I should doubtless be wholly bald. Miss Lillian Brown, R. F. D. 1, Liberty, Mo., Oct. 29, 1909."

Verdict For Westery Plaintiff

Jury Awards John Di Paola $473 from Each of Two Fire Insurance Companies—Annual Election of Building Post W. R. C.—Pawcatuck Lodge Makes Choice of Officers.

When the superior court, Judge Stearns, and a jury, reconvened Friday morning, in Westery, the hearing in the case of John Di Paola against the Humboldt and National Fire Insurance companies was resumed. The plaintiff, who seeks to recover $500 on policies of each of the companies, was owned by Castrax Negrelli. The fire was destroyed by fire on the night of October 12, 1909, the building being owned by Castrax Negrelli. The insurance association declared the fire to be of incendiary origin and offered a reward of $500 for evidence that would lead to the conviction of the guilty party. But the case on trial is to recover for fire loss under the policies and has nothing to do with any other feature of the case. Mr. Di Paola's testimony, under the queries of his counsel, Judge John W. Sweeney, was the continuation of his evidence given on Thursday, in which he recited the articles and values enumerated in the itemized proof of loss. He said that after sending the proof of loss he received no reply or instructions from the insurance companies; had, in fact, never heard from the companies and had received no offer of settlement from the companies or from the local agent. When examined by Cyrus N. Van Slyck, counsel for the interested insurance companies, he said that a friend had prepared the schedule, as set forth in the proof of loss and that the friend was a man named Rose, a salesman for a New York house. He knew Rose before coming to Westery, two years ago and Rose made frequent business visits to Westery. He was in the town for four or five days before the night of the fire or at the time of the fire.

Castrax Negrelli testified that he owned the burned building, and that on the night of the fire he and his family were at a party at the home of his son-in-law, Pasquale Gentile. Di Paola and Rose were there also. Pasquale Gentile told of the party at his house and of going to the fire with Rose. Di Paola kept a grocery store in Pierce street, which was destroyed by fire on the night of October 12, 1909, the building being owned by Castrax Negrelli. The insurance association declared the fire to be of incendiary origin and offered a reward of $500 for evidence that would lead to the conviction of the guilty party. But the case on trial is to recover for fire loss under the policies and has nothing to do with any other feature of the case. Mr. Di Paola's testimony, under the queries of his counsel, Judge John W. Sweeney, was the continuation of his evidence given on Thursday, in which he recited the articles and values enumerated in the itemized proof of loss. He said that after sending the proof of loss he received no reply or instructions from the insurance companies; had, in fact, never heard from the companies and had received no offer of settlement from the companies or from the local agent. When examined by Cyrus N. Van Slyck, counsel for the interested insurance companies, he said that a friend had prepared the schedule, as set forth in the proof of loss and that the friend was a man named Rose, a salesman for a New York house. He knew Rose before coming to Westery, two years ago and Rose made frequent business visits to Westery. He was in the town for four or five days before the night of the fire or at the time of the fire.

Witness asked Rose to remain and help straighten out matters after the fire. Rose was not in Westery continuously during the period, but made daily trips to Norwich and New London. He did remain in Westery after the fire and did not know just where he lived. Di Paola came to Westery to live June 11, 1909, or four months before the fire. He had been in Westery before with his uncle, John Peasey of New York, and came to America in 1905. Rose was in the employ of Peasey. The proof of loss was written by Rose, as was the itemized schedule. This was taken to Irvine O. Chester's office, the agent who issued the policies, and was there typewritten by a lady in an adjoining office, and Rose paid for the work. The original written list was torn up in Agent Chester's office and thrown in the waste basket.

Di Paola testified that all his books and bills were burned. The bills were in the same drawer with the policies, and the bills were burned and the policies saved as they happened to be in the bottom of the drawer. Witness said that all the bills were lost and that the schedule of loss was made up from memory but was about correct. Besides the two policies in this case, Di Paola had still another policy of $700 in the Orient of Hartford. Witness was at the party in the Gentile home when the alarm of fire was given and when he arrived at the store the whole building was ablaze. Rose was with witness at the party and accompanied him to the fire. Besides these two, Mr. and Mrs. Negrelli and nine children, were at the party.

All those who had any right in the burned building were at the party at the Gentile's. There was no stove in the store and the store was lit by electricity, but the lights were not turned on after 6.15 on the night of the fire and all was darkness until the building was found to be afire. Witness remained in Negrelli's over the store and married a daughter of Negrelli's, July 4, 1910.

The annual election of Pawcatuck lodge, No. 9, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, resulted in the following choice: William W. Bromley, master; Newman F. Tuckerman, senior warden; Louis J. Reuter, junior warden; Frederic C. Fleming, senior deacon; Frank N. Ayers, junior deacon; Evans Stewart, senior steward; Neil McKenzie, junior steward; Elbert W. Clark, treasurer; Arthur N. Nash, marshal; Samuel Girven, chaplain; Abraham Lewis Tyler; Thomas W. McKenzie, Robert E. Cole, William A. Hillard, trustees; Thomas McKenzie, Charles A. Morgan, Denison C. Hinckley, finance committee.

LEBANON SCHOOLS Lose Much Through Unnecessary Absence of Pupils—Supervisor F. W. Barber's Report. Reports show that last year, in the town of Lebanon, there was an average absence of 46 pupils per day from the schools of the town. This meant a direct loss of $1,000, which might have been received had the state appropriation for schools had the attendance been perfect. Had the 46 pupils been absent in a body, two of the largest schools in town might have been closed, thus saving more than $650 in teachers' salaries. An earnest effort is being made to improve the attendance at the schools, school officers and teachers soliciting the hearty co-operation of parents and townspeople. It is the purpose of Supervisor Barber to publish each month the records made in the several districts of the town, the best record heading the list and from that grading off to the poorest record. Following is the record for November: Total registration 201 Total absences 216 Total tardinesses 216 Average attendance 132 Average absence per day 24 Had all absences occurred in one district, one of our largest schools might have been closed. The town lost by these 216 absences in November $55.55.

Being Happy. A middle west farmer afflicted with asthma was compelled to go to Colorado for his health. He had not been in Colorado long before he sold his farm on the flats and bought a mountain ranch. Returning health gave him a livelier sense of life. He became interested in farmers' institutes and learned much about farming that had never occurred to him. Back home he had been content if he paid his running expenses and netted a very modest annuity. His first potato crop in Colorado netted him $125 an acre, after charging up the cost of the land and his labor and that of his horses. A practice which had not been his custom in the east. He found farmers who had farmed in Colorado for thirty years without a single failure of crops. The seasons were long, and if the farmer failed properly to water his crops from his ditches it was his own fault. He was as sure of his crop as he was of his seasons. The wagon roads were good in the winter in the year. The soil was wonderfully rich and enduring in the properties necessary for the raising of sugar-beets, potatoes, alfalfa, vegetables and fruits. One Colorado friend encouraged some of his neighbors in the old home to follow his example. Those who could not live comfortably in winter on the flats found health and prosperity on the southern slopes of the Rockies. The sun made farm work a pleasure. The air of the mountains renewed the physical joys of life.—Editorial in Collier's for December 3.
