Seized on Writ of Replevin at Home of Mrs. C. S. Doane's Parents.

Several years ago Grace Gordon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Gordon, corner of High street, married Charles S. Doane of New York and went to that city to reside. Eventually there was some trouble and finally Mr. Doane decided to leave her husband. He alleges that a little while later, when he was absent from the house, she returned and packed up all the household furniture valued at $225, and shipped it to this city, where it was taken in charge by her parents.

OBITUARY.

William W. Warrillow, 47, died Thursday afternoon at 6 o'clock at the home of his sister, Mrs. Jennie F. Tucker, North Windham, following a short illness as the result of a shock. Mr. Warrillow came to the home of his sister Wednesday afternoon from living with his daughter, Mrs. Jennie F. Robinson, since last fall, when he left the Soldiers' home at Tegu, Me.

He was apparently in good health Wednesday evening and also Thursday morning, but while sitting in a chair he suddenly fell from it to the floor and was stricken with a stroke of a shock. He did not become unconscious immediately, but grew worse rapidly and at last passed away at the hour above stated. Mr. Warrillow was well known in Willimantic and the town of Windham, having lived in the city and town for about twenty years. He was a merchant by trade and worked for the Willimantic Linen company, now the American Thread company.

Lame Ducks.

The New York Evening Post refers harshly to ex-congressmen hunting federal jobs as the Dishonorable Order of Lame Ducks. "Extinct volcanoes" Dirrell called public men whom a discerning electorate had retired to private life. Yet such men, like the volcano, desire to remain forever in the public view.

The Lame Duck is always with us after every election. There is something pathetic about the sight of a defeated officeholder trying somehow to hold on to the public utter. The Evening Post thinks it is not so much the desire for salary as the reluctance to give up the dignities of official place. But this diagnosis is not correct. He is out of a job. He must live. If he is a lawyer he has no practice; if he is a business man he has long ago abandoned business.

Nine-tenths of the ex-congressmen, for example, have no money, and have lived on their salaries. It is well-nigh impossible for such a man to reduce his style of living, or to begin work in private life where he was twenty or thirty years ago. His only resource is an appointment and the lingering hope that some day he may get his congressional job back again. But he never will.—Portland Oregonian.

DEAD AT 85.

John H. Parkhurst, Native of Pomfret, One of Those Who Saw Halley's Comet 75 Years Ago.

John H. Parkhurst died at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, George and Mrs. Charles Sabin, Wednesday night. Mr. Parkhurst was 85 years old, having been born in the nearby town of Pomfret, Nov. 15, 1825. Mr. Parkhurst's death was due to a general breaking down incident to his advanced years. In a life that lacked but a little of spending a full century, Mr. Parkhurst was a witness to the greatest period of progress in the world's history. The period of his existence included that time during which the country developed from a group of colonies to a magnificent nation, and the years that marked the introduction of the telegraph, the telephone, the development of electricity, the building of the great transportation systems from the end of the stage coach to that of motor propelled teams and of the growth of hamlets into mammoth cities. In his native Windham county the changes that he lived to see were little less than marvelous. As a boy he caught salmon that ran up the Quinebaug from the water. He lived to be among the last of those who remember the first railroad trains that ran over the old Norwich and Worcester road, and was date and the first sergeant will see that all other books and papers are written up to date, especially the company records, book so that they may be inspected by the commanding officer on February 1.

The first sergeant, quartermaster sergeant and company clerk will report at 7 o'clock p. m. that the records, books and property may be inspected before assembly.

The greater part of his many years of active career were devoted to teaching and to farming. Nearly all of his life work was done in the nearby towns of the union, one of whom died in Woodstock. He was a graduate of Woodstock Academy, and at the time of his death the oldest. He spent a short period in Rhode Island.

On June 3, 1841, Mr. Parkhurst married Sarah C. Comstock, who died on June 2, 1882. Three children were born of the union, one of whom died in infancy. Mrs. Charles Sabin of this city and Edward H. Parkhurst of New Haven survive.

The deceased was a descendant of the Parkhurst brothers who came into this section from England with the early settlers. He was remarkably bright and active during all of his life, so much so that when he passed his last birthday much attention was given him by the press of New England.

Mill on 45 Hour Schedule.

The Monohansett Manufacturing company is operating their mill, beginning this week, on a 40 hour schedule of 4 hours each day, the first four days of the week. The general weakness of the market for cotton cloth and the depression of the industry throughout the country is responsible for the curtailment.
