Stonington Contested Election Case Judge Greene Decides that Bradley Was Not Elected and Sustains the Demurrer to the Petition.

Decision was handed down on Wednesday by Judge Greene in regard to the election in the town of Stonington at the last annual town election. The matter concerned the election of selectmen and was heard in chambers. He holds that the respondent was properly elected, as declared at the time. The present case had placed marks before the names of both democratic candidates, or of one democratic and one republican, which would have complied with the statute. It is unreasonable to claim that in order to exercise his right to vote for selectmen, he must necessarily vote for two, and cannot legally vote for one. The statute says that the elector must place a mark before the names of candidates for whom he desires to vote. This does not mean that he must vote for the man whom he desires unless he does not vote for any other candidate. He may vote for as many candidates for the office in question as the law allows him to vote for, or any part of that number, but can do so only by placing a cross mark in the voting circle of the elector, and the name of each candidate whom he desires and can legally vote for are on another ticket, or whether part are on another ticket, as specified in the statute. It follows from this construction of the statute that the respondent was properly elected, and the demurrer is sustained on all its grounds.

Dressing Your Hair For the Evening (Any Lyster in the New York Revue.)

"Proper care of the hair doesn't require drenching with water and scouring with soap, going around for hours with the hair dripping wet, and then back, bringing on headaches and coarsening the hair. Indeed, the less soap and water the better. The best way is to use a hair cream or hair oil, and the hair will be clean and the hair light and fluffy. Use the dry shampoo with certain beneficial ingredients. Put in a quart jar one-half pound corn meal and four ounces of amoniac. Shake until thoroughly mixed. A beautiful cleansing powder with a delicate perfume will be the result. Powder the hair generously, then brush out thoroughly. The close of the scalp and hair roots brings out the natural color of the hair, makes it soft and fluffy, and if continued regularly causes the hair to become long, thick and glossy, for amoniac is a natural hair grower."
