BANKS BILL PASSED BY THE HOUSE

Accepted as an Amendment to the Minority Report by a Margin of One

SPEAKER SCOTT CAST DECIDING VOTE

Some Members Voted For it to Bring About Disagreeing Action With the Senate—Predictions That There Will be no Public Utilities Legislation This Year—Some Warm Colloquies in the Lobby.

Hartford, June 15.—The Banks bill for a public utilities commission, drawn by Daniel Dayeaport and introduced by Mr. Banks of Fairfield as an amendment to the Judson bill, which passed the senate last week by a vote of 26 to 9, was passed by the house this evening, 123 to 106.

Amendment Accepted, 119 to 118. Prior to this, after the close of debate which began at 11:30 this morning and did not conclude until after five o'clock, the house had voted 119 to 118 to accept the amendment to the minority report.

Speaker Broke the Tie. This tie was broken by Speaker Scott after he had stated that he believed in a public utilities commission, but did not believe the minority report, or Judson bill, was constitutional. The result was greeted with cheer by the members who had voted for the Banks bill.

Amended Bill Passed, 123 to 106. As soon as a clot was restored, Mr. Banks moved the previous question, which was ordered, 123 to 97, and passage of the amended bill and on this the roll call was taken, many members having left to catch trains, as it was then after six o'clock. The house adjourned at 6:15.

Prediction of No Commission Legislation. The prediction was freely made that there would be no public utilities commission legislation this session.

Voted for Bill Without Reading It. Members who had voted for the Banks bill, freely admitted that they did so to bring about disagreeing action with the senate. Members said they had not read the bill, and some of those who were for the minority report declared that the Banks bill was unconstitutional and that the senate would never pass it.

Some Angry Colloquies. As the members went out into the corridors a riot was restored. Mr. Banks was particularly popular, and some angry and some of a jolly nature. Scores of legislative agents who spent the night in the lobby, rushed down to congratulate members who had voted one way or the other.

Doors Closed to Spectators. While the scene was not outwardly as exciting as two years ago when the commission bill was under debate, the feeling was even more intense. A vote of the house the doors were closed to all who had no right there, except that many ladies were admitted.

Smoking Allowed in House. During the afternoon the bar against smoking was raised, as it was found that members were going in to smoke to stretch their legs and have a smoke. As the capital restaurant ran out of food, quite a few of the members went hungry, the minority bill advocates resisting attempts to have a recess.

Analogous to Two Years Ago. The situation tonight is regarded as analogous to that of two years ago, when the senate passed the Barnum bill and the house rejected it. Some of the voters of the minority bill, however, the situation is altered.

Banks Makes a Pledge. Representative Banks, who closed the debate after the previous question had been ordered, in his final plea promised several times that if the house would pass the Banks bill and send it to the senate, and if the senate would not pass it and would again send it to the house, he would vote for the passage of the minority bill.

Proposition to Table Minority Report. He professed his promise by appealing to Speaker Scott for a ruling. If it would not be possible for the house to table the minority report which had not passed, so that the house could keep this bill in its possession, he would see that the senate would do so, and if the Banks bill was rejected then the house could table the minority report of the table and he would do everything he could to aid its passage.

Speaker Scott's Ruling. Speaker Scott ruled that the house by vote could keep the minority bill in its possession, although it was the custom to dispose of a measure that had been rejected by passage of another measure.

Banks' Pledge a Vote-Catcher. It was the claim afterwards of many of those favoring the minority report, that the wavering ones were influenced by Representative Banks' offer and promise. Mr. Banks in his argument had devoted much time to attacking the constitutionality of the minority bill. Most of those speaking on that side of the question used this argument.

The Vote by Counties. The vote on the adoption of the amendment was as follows:

Table with 3 columns: County, Yes, No. Hartford county... 11 6. New Haven county... 18 10. Windham county... 20 24. Litchfield county... 24 14. Middlesex county... 11 11. Totals... 119 118.

33 Democrats for Banks Bill. Among party members there was a split of opinion. It had been predicted that under the lead of Representative Fisher of the judiciary committee and the democrats who stood with Senator Judson, that the democrats would vote almost solidly for the Judson bill. The roll call showed that 33 democrats voted for the Banks bill against it for the Judson bill.
