

BEATTIE PREPARES FOR HIS DEATH

Received Sacrament Of Lord's Supper in the Death Cell Yesterday

NOW FULLY RESIGNED TO HIS FATE

"The Sooner it is Ended, the Better," He Tells Jail Guard—Father Makes Final Despairing Appeal to Governor—Jury of Twelve to Witness Execution Tomorrow—Numerous Murder Trials Now in Progress.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 22.—Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., the youthful wife murderer, received the sacrament of the Lord's Supper today. He professed religion and told his spiritual advisers that he faced the unknown with equanimity. Although Beattie is subdued in demeanor, the wonderful reserve that has thus far sustained the condemned man has not deserted him.

Sacrament in Death Cell.

The sacrament was administered in the death cell in the state penitentiary this afternoon. Rev. John J. Pike, the Presbyterian minister, who has labored with Beattie since his condemnation, officiated, assisted by Rev. Benjamin Dennis of South Richmond. The only other person was the prisoner's aged and broken-hearted father. The vigilance of the death watch was not relaxed during the ceremony, and the guards withdrew to the corridor.

Resigned to His Fate.

Reports that Beattie has broken down have been disproved. During the desperate efforts made for a new trial and for reprieve from the governor, the cause under which the convicted man labored was of the utmost character. Naturally he was irascible and given to sudden outbursts of anger. But these have disappeared. That Beattie is now resigned to his fate is proved by a remark to his guard today when the suggestion was made that Governor Mann grant a reprieve at the eleventh hour.

"Let us get it over with," Beattie is said to have remarked. "The sooner it is ended the better."

Father Appeals to Governor.

The elder Beattie within the past few hours has paid a secret visit to Governor Mann in a final despairing effort to gain the governor's intercession. He was vainly pleading for a reprieve at the eleventh hour.

Twelve Men to Witness Execution.

Invitations have been sent to the twelve members of the jury who tried the case in the death chamber Friday morning. Under the law, the witnesses must present themselves at the prison before seven o'clock that morning. Shortly thereafter Beattie will be taken from his cell to the chair. Within ten minutes at the most the jury will be trooping from the chamber to the death chamber.

Governor Deluged with Letters.

The same mails that bore the invitations to the witnesses brought more than 100 letters to Governor Mann. Some of the writers commended his policy of non-interference with the mandate of the law. Others hysterically called upon him to intervene. To none of them was any attention paid.

Still Reads Sporting Page.

Beattie spent the day in reading. While much of his reading is of a religious nature, he maintains still his keen interest in the daily newspapers, paying especial attention to the sporting pages. His appetite, so his guards say, is excellent and he displays no abnormality either mental or physical. Unless there is a sudden breakdown Beattie will walk to his doom unafraid.

house. Patterson ordered him from the premises in a threatening manner, and he drew a pistol and marched toward the door. Patterson and his friend of the point of the revolver.

Strain said Mrs. Patterson ran after her husband, and they went away together. After her return she advised him for jeopardizing her chances of success in her divorce action, the witness said. As he was leaving Strain said, Mrs. Patterson asked him to leave his revolver, and he complied.

Strain identified the weapon with which Patterson was killed as the one he left with Mrs. Patterson. Witnesses were introduced to show that Mrs. Patterson called up her husband on the telephone at the apartment the morning after the shooting took place, and he answered: "I don't ever want to see you again."

Strain testified that she waited at a spot near where the shooting occurred, and when Patterson saw her he started to run away. Later they walked off together.

GOLDEN'S BOY NOT ALLOWED TO TESTIFY.

Prosecution Handicapped in Effort to Convict Man of Murder.

Hillsburg, Nov. 22.—Edward Golden, the eight-year-old son of George Golden, wealthy shoe merchant of Wickford, Pa., charged with killing his wife, did not testify at his father's trial today as expected. Judge Shafter would not allow the lad to testify on account of his youth. The same decision held good when the prosecution called Albert Simpson, aged nine, a playmate of Edward's, whom he is alleged to have told about the shooting.

Mrs. Golden was shot late on the night of July 18 last. Golden is said to have been suddenly aroused from sound sleep and to have fired his revolver at a shadow near a window. Believing a burglar was in the room, instead he killed his wife. The prosecution alleges Golden deliberately murdered his wife from fear of being exposed by her for business transactions not altogether in accordance with law.

The Golden boy was in the room on the night of the tragedy. When neighbors rushed in the lad was kneeling beside his mother's body crying. Mrs. Jerry Small, who lived next door to the Golden, testified at the recent hearing that she heard Mrs. Golden say "Don't do it, George, don't do it," followed by three revolver shots. According to her, the Golden house was lit up at the time, and that, contrary to Golden's statement that the house was in darkness, Mrs. Small has disappeared since the habeas corpus hearing, and all efforts to find the woman have been futile. Lacking Mrs. Small's testimony, the prosecution had hoped to have the boy testify whether the father was in any conversation between his parents that night.

FILIPINO A WITNESS OF BATTLESHIP MURDER.

Saw Beeks Firing at Allen on the U. S. S. Nebraska.

Boston, Nov. 22.—Faustine Paz, a Filipino mess attendant on the battleship Nebraska, who peeped into the junior officers' mess room during the shooting was going on and then ran up on deck, where the principal witness called at the continuation today of the trial in the United States circuit court of James Beeks, a negro mess attendant, charged with the murder of Alexander Allen, another colored waiter.

Paz testified that on the morning of May 8 last, when the battleship Nebraska was in drydock in the Charlestown navy yard, he passed Beeks while the latter was shining shoes in the corridor leading from the junior officers' mess. No words were exchanged, but he heard Beeks mutter "You got me, you son of a bitch."

Allen was sweeping the mess room at the time. When he re-passed about ten minutes later both Beeks and Allen were in the mess room scuffling over a broom, he said.

While he was in the wardrobe pantry shortly afterward he heard some shouting and running out into the corridor peeped into the junior officers' mess room.

Allen was standing looking out of the door with his left side to the door. Beeks was standing four or six feet from the door, firing at Allen. Paz testified that as soon as he saw what was going on he ran up on deck, where he saw Beeks firing at Allen. Paz testified that the witness caused Beeks to smile broadly in the prisoner's dock.

Almost the last words of Walsh to the jury were that they would be asked to take the life of a man on the finding of an infinitesimal amount of cyanide of potassium in the stomach of the dead millionaire, and the evidence of a chemist who had been hired at $20 a day to find a deadly quantity of strychnine in Colonel Swope's viscera.

Witnesses for the commonwealth who testified about the shooting in West Philadelphia on May 4th last were closely cross-examined today in an effort to show that before the shots were fired Leary and McMahon were engaged in a fight and that the latter was on the ground when the shooting occurred. Some of the witnesses admitted that they saw McMahon on the ground, but they did not know whether he was conscious or unconscious for the defense told of seeing the prisoner on the ground with Leary on top of him when the first shot was fired.

A feature of the commonwealth's testimony was the statement by a witness that Leary's last words as he lay dying in the street were "I expected it."

MRS. O'SHAUGHNESSY BREAKS DOWN IN COURT.

Overcome by Sight of Husband's Blood-Stained Shirt.

New York, Nov. 22.—Mrs. Frances O'Shaughnessy, the young woman who last spring shot her husband, George O'Shaughnessy, "to save his soul," broke down today during her trial in the court of special sessions when she saw a blood-stained shirt worn by her husband when he was found dead, kneeling by the side of the O'Shaughnessy apartment.

"Oh, don't let them do that!" she shrieked and then buried her face on the floor, sobbing convulsively. A physician and a woman, who soon remained her composure. The trial proceeded, but testimony as to the killing had its origin in O'Shaughnessy's attentions to another woman than his wife, and the defense is that the wife, in a delicate condition, became mentally unbalanced by reason of her husband's treatment of her and shot him. After the shooting she was confined in a private hospital, and then prayed for her husband's soul.

EFFORT TO PROVE BOSWORTH INSANE.

Attendants at Insane Hospital Testify for Defense.

Burlington, Vt., Nov. 22.—The prosecution having introduced evidence to show that Arthur Bosworth shot and killed Mae Labelle at Essex Junction last June after the young woman had caused the discharge from the hotel where both were employed, the defense today endeavored to show that the defendant was mentally responsible.

Today's session of Bosworth's trial on a charge of murder attended from the insane hospital at Waterbury gave their testimony. This in brief was to the effect that while Bosworth was under observation at the hospital he was irritable, criticized the management of the hospital, and was possessed of the idea that his confinement at the insane hospital was a part of a plan to deprive him of a hearing in court.

Tarring Case Nearing End

WILL PROBABLY BE GIVEN TO THE JURY TODAY.

JUDGE INSTRUCTS THE JURY

Defense Regards Court's Remarks as Favorable to Their Side—Defendants Deny Being Present at the Tarring.

Lincoln Center, Kan., Nov. 22.—With only two more closing arguments to be delivered, it seemed probable tonight that the "tar party" case would go to the jury tomorrow. The testimony was completed shortly after noon today. A recess of two hours was then taken while the judge prepared his instructions. Prosecutor McCanness completed his closing argument.

At a night session, Attorney J. J. McCurdy and Z. C. Milliken spoke for the defense. Col. Donald Ritchie and A. N. Hawkes, representing the defense, and the state, respectively, will speak tomorrow.

The Judge's Instructions.

Attorneys for the defense regard the judge's instructions as highly favorable to their clients. Prosecutor McCanness said he was satisfied with them, however. The instructions were that the defendants might be found guilty of aiding and abetting the crime, even though they were not present. But the mere fact that the defendants had talked with the assailants of Miss Chamberlain regarding the contemplated attack was not in itself sufficient ground on which to base a conviction.

Miss Chamberlain's Mother Present.

The courtroom, which was half filled this morning, was again crowded when the Chamberlain mother testified. Many persons brought their dinner with them and remained during recess prior to the night session. Miss Chamberlain occupied a seat near the jury box. Her mother was with her. The three defendants, A. N. Simms, Sherrill Clark and John Schmidt, switched their chairs so that they faced the jury.

Ricord Heard Argument.

One who heard part of what the speakers said was Edward Ricord, the barber, who deceived Miss Chamberlain into the tarring. He is confined in the jail under the north end of the courthouse. When McCanness began speaking, Ricord, who roams the jail, switched the chair to face him. He is the only occupant, threw a shoe full of coal into the stove and went over to the front door to listen. As the speaker's voice became louder he remarked: "I'll bet he's giving it to us. I'm sorry I can't hear those speeches better."

Did Not Intend to Be Parties to Tarring.

Two of the defendants, John Schmidt and Sherrill Clark, were the chief witnesses today. Both of them contradicted Simms' statement that the three defendants never intended to be parties to the tarring, but admitted they made an effort to reach the scene of the crime. Clark explained that he was at the mill from which the party started, because business called him there.

Deer Witnesses in Rebuttal.

Schmidt said he "just dropped down to the mill to see the boys, as was his nightly custom. Schmidt recalled having heard Simms warn the tarrers against pointing the schoolteacher. A dozen other witnesses, among them E. G. Clark and Chester Anderson, were called in rebuttal.

Warned Boys Against It.

When Schmidt was testifying, the subject of tarring Miss Chamberlain was brought up. "Did any one say that should not be done?" was asked.

"Yes, sir," replied Schmidt, "both Mr. Simms and myself warned the boys against doing it, but they were not to be stopped."

Witness said he had no part in the tarring.

Talked Over Girl's Actions.

Sherrill Clark, one of the defendants, was then called. "Did you meet Chester Anderson at the mill that day and have some conversation with him?" asked Attorney McCanness.

"Yes," he replied. "We talked about Mary's actions; how she had been seen at night coming from a tent occupied by a bridegroom. We also talked about her going with two young men."

Miss Chamberlain's Sweetheart.

Homer Hotick, who is keeping company with Miss Chamberlain, was called. He told of having a talk with James Booze soon after the tarring in the latter's home. "I wasn't at the tarring, but by God, I would have been if I could have got there."

"You've been going with Mary Chamberlain for the last five or six months, haven't you?" asked Attorney Ritchie on cross examination.

"Yes, sir," he answered.

"Engaged to marry her?"

"No, sir."

FIVE SHIPS TO THE RESCUE

Work of Transferring Passengers Not Difficult, as Weather Was Favorable—Reassuring Messages from Ship.

New York, Nov. 22.—Whether or not the passengers on the steamer Prinz Joachim, which went ashore on Atwood Key, near Salsmana Island, in the Bahamas, early today, had been transferred this evening to Ward line steamers, one of which a late afternoon message said, was already starting by, could not be learned up to late this evening. The steamer's position of wireless communication. Among the Prinz Joachim's passengers are William J. Bryan, his wife and grandchildren.

Five Ships to the Rescue.

No less than five ships, and possibly seven, according to tonight's advices, are on their way to the assistance of the Prinz Joachim. It was considered another triumph of modern methods that such a fleet of ships was mobilized for rescue only a few hours after the Prinz Joachim grounded in the Bahamas. This position it has not yet reached, is about 1,000 miles from New York.

Passengers All Safe.

The few personal messages received during the day gave assurance that the passengers were all safe. The steamer was rescued by the four Ward line steamers from Salsmana Island, to his father, who lives in Cincinnati and is said to be a close friend of President Taft. His message read: "All safe. Expect to continue voyage."

Transfer of Passengers Not Difficult.

"The transfer of passengers was not expected to be attended by great difficulties by the Hamburg-American line officials, since the weather was reported to be favorable. Any of the passengers want to return to New York, they can come here on the Steiermark. Those who wish to continue the journey will be taken to Santiago and then to Port Antonio by the Villandia. From Port Antonio they will be transferred by rail to Kingston. Mr. Bryan expected to make his first stop on the voyage. He took ship from here to see his son-in-law, who is a British army officer at Kingston.

Carried Full Cargo.

The Prinz Joachim sailed with a full cargo of general merchandise, principally wool, beef, flour and machinery. With these provisions she drew a full draught of water forward and aft, which may account for her grounding in a place she might otherwise have cleared."

LEONARD H. HEALEY AROUSES INSURGENTS

By Reference to Political Complexion of Legislative Committee.

Columbus, O., Nov. 22.—Assailing the system of state representation in the National Grange, opposing the election of an all-republican legislative committee, and demanding that the report of the George P. Hampton case be expunged from the records of the grange executive committee, insurgents against the regulars.

The insurgents went into action on the morning of the National Grange state representation which is now limited to the state master and his wife to one based upon membership. Following a heated session the plan was referred to a committee.

A resolution presented by the regulars provided that the master-elect, Oliver Wilson, Overseer of the state, and Master N. J. Bacheider be made a committee to personally promote the legislative interests of the Grangers in Washington.

Overseer Healey called attention to the fact that all three were republicans and the insurgents at once started a protest. Healey won a reconsideration of the resolution.

The Hampton case was reopened by Master W. H. of Kentucky, who offered a resolution to have a reference made to the National Grange executive committee, Hampton was charged three years ago with libeling the Grange paper, but an attempt to expel him failed.

Today the case was carried over.
