THAMES RIVER AGAIN OPENED TO NAVIGATION

Steamer Chelsea Breaks Through and Resumes Her Regular Schedule Between Norwich and New York.

Since the early part of January until Sunday, the Thames river had been closed to navigation above Allyn Point, and during a portion of the time it was impossible to get as far as that.

Sunday morning the steamer Chelsea of the Norwich and New York Propeller company started up the river and reached here about nine o'clock. It was necessary to break through rather easy time was had. By making the trip the river was opened and a tug was necessary to break through later followed the steamer to this city, bringing a large load of coal to the Lucas Paper company mill and taking down a large which had been marooned there for a number of weeks.

While the river has been closed, the Chelsea has been running from New York to Montville most of the time, though there has been a general overhauling and painting so that the boat is in first class condition. The rooms on the boat have all been done over. She left Saturday evening on time and it is not expected that her schedule will be interrupted again by ice. Local Agent F. V. Knouse had a good sized cargo of freight for the boat to take down Sunday night and the resumption of her trips will mean plenty of business from now on.

Captain Pettigrew, formerly of Scott's, has succeeded his late partner as pilot on the Chelsea.

WILL REMAN HERE.
