MASCIOLI PAYS THE DEATH PENALTY

Murderer of Frank Cusumano at Hull, Mass., Expiates His Crime in Electric Chair

THE SENTENCE OF MRS. CUSUMANO COMMUTED

Governor's Council in the Light of Additional Information Finds a Reasonable Doubt of the Woman's Guilt—Latter Submits Affidavit in Which She Claims That She Had No Knowledge of Crime Until After It Had Been Committed cliff said that his client had made no confession, but had made certain statements. Almost two weeks ago it was said that if they saved the woman, they would have to save him. Clothing arguments were then made and District Attorney Barker said that the affidavit of Mrs. Cusumano was inconsistent and unworthy of credence.

Reasonable Doubt of Woman's Guilt. Under the law, the executive council is required to issue a formal statement of its reasons for granting a commutation of sentence, at the conclusion of its meeting the council made public the following statement:

By reason of additional information laid before the council, its members came to the conclusion that there was reasonable ground for doubt as to the guilt of Mrs. Cusumano. Commuted to the first degree and thereby unconditionally recommended that her sentence be commuted to imprisonment for life.

Mascioli Executed This Morning. Mascioli was taken from the death cell to the execution room and placed in the electric chair a few minutes after midnight. The current was immediately applied and at 12:15 o'clock the physician in attendance pronounced him legally dead.

Mascioli Showed No Trace of Fear. Mascioli walked to the chair between two guards with eyes open and head erect. Mrs. Cusumano was not in the death house at the time of the execution.
