LAUREL HILL BRIDGE RECONSTRUCTION WORK INCLUDES ENTIRE NEW FLOOR SYSTEM—

Seven 3 1/2 Ton Beams Have Been Put In—Gang is Now Splicing End Posts—Open in About 10 Days.

After nine weeks of reconstruction work, the Laurel Hill bridge improvements are now well on their way to completion and in from ten days to two weeks more it is expected to have the bridge open to public travel again.

The first two weeks of the work had to be devoted to getting the concrete work torn up, but during the time that the actual steel work had gone on rapidly, considering the difficult nature of the job and the fact that at the beginning or near the end of the day caused by the non-arrival at the proper time of some of the steel material.

The rusting of the iron work so extensive, it is believed to be due in large measure to the fact that the trolley company in winter uses salt on the hill just beyond the bridge to remove the snow.

Corrugated steel buckle plates resting on the beams will support the concrete sidewalks, which will be placed along each side of the bridge so that no water containing salt can get to the steel.
