CLEARING HOUSE CHARGES ON CHECK COLLECTIONS.

Wickersham Wants to Know Whether the Practice Violates Law.

Washington, Aug. 13.—A collateral phase of the so-called money trust, it developed today, is being investigated by Attorney General Wickersham.

The inquiry, which may affect clearing house associations throughout the country, revolves about the rule of the New York Clearing House association requiring its members to furnish a specified sum for the collection of out of town checks drawn on certain parts of the country and at the same time giving them discretion whether to make charges for similar collections in their localities.

While officials of the department of justice are reticent in regard to the inquiry, it is learned that the attorney general may refer the whole question to the secretary of the treasury for remedial measures through the controller of the currency if it is found that the law is being technically violated, having similar rules of years or that the practice while not illegal, seems against public policy.
