

INFANTRYMEN WESTERLY STREETS

Regular Troops of the U. S. A. March Through Town on Their Way to Stonny Brook—Field Manoeuvres Begun Thursday—James Benson Escapes From State Workhouse—Knights Templar and Knights of Columbus Elect Officers.

For the first time regular troops of the United States army were seen in the streets of Westerly Thursday, and the fact will undoubtedly be related in the future history of the town. The body of troops was under the command of Colonel Davies, with Major McNeil as chief staff officer, and composed of the Second, Twelfth, One Hundred and thirty-first, One Hundred and thirty-fourth, and One Hundred and forty-sixth companies, from Fort Wright, Fishers Island, Eighty-eighth, One Hundred and fifty-seventh companies from Fort Terry, Plum Island. Besides there were a band, the engineers' corps, wagon train and hospital corps, all of the New London artillery district. The several commands of the coast artillery corps were assembled as infantrymen. These troops mobilized at Fort Mansfield at Watch Hill, Wednesday afternoon, and encamped there during the night. This was supposed to be an advancing army to attack the enemy with station at Stonny Brook near the village of Old Mynde, the army of defence being composed of the Forty-third, 110th, 123d and 124d companies from Fort Terry, who were at their station in the manoeuvre zone, Wednesday.

The troops broke camp at 8 o'clock Thursday morning and proceeded on the hike of about eighteen miles. First the train of five army wagons, with the cooking outfit and commissary supplies, each wagon being drawn by four mules, accompanied by a large guard, was started, the main body of troops following. At eleven o'clock the wagon train passed through Westerly, but it was an hour and a half before the marching body arrived. Several halts were made on the march from Port Mansfield to the heavily laden soldiers rest. Each man carried blanket, poncho, haversack, mess outfit, canteen, rifle, bayonet, blank cartridges, aggregating a weight of at least fifty pounds. Therefore the men were in regular marching order and were not on a march for record time. They reached the Butler farmhouse at 11:30, where there was an opportunity to fill canteens with water, and the soldiers went into camp for dinner in the vacant lot near the narrow fabric mill. Each man carried a haversack ration of pressed corn beef, bread and butter, boiled eggs and chocolate candy for dessert. After an hour's rest the body of troops marched up Elm street, and through the village of Westerly. The Eight coast artillery corps comprises an engineer corps, headed by the Ely, coast artillery band of Fort Wright, presented an inspiring appearance, as they marched into Dixon square. The

WINS WAGER BY MAKING HAIR GROW ON BALD HEAD

TELLS HOW IT WAS DONE.

I have just finished the application of a wonderful lotion on my head which a few weeks ago was almost completely bald. Truly my friends look upon my condition as my luxuriant growth of hair. It is amazing how much younger I appear. This sudden adventuring of miraculous transformation is the result of a wager with a doctor friend of mine who declared that he would grow my hair on my bald head. I was inflexible to stop my falling hair, cure my dandruff and cause a new growth of thick hair of a natural color. I confess that I was sceptical, for experience with many remedies and ointments had already convinced me that this was impossible. Yet I consented to try the preparation which he recommended, but I wagered that it would not succeed. I used the lotion regularly in a day, rubbing well into the scalp with a small brush, for I had been strongly recommended against shampooing. This sudden adventuring of hair, because of its extraordinary hair growing power, in less than a week I was able to show my hair growing so rapidly that I could not deny having lost my wager, and I assure you that I am a happy man. I grew more gracefully. But I had gained a growth of hair, I had not overjoyed with this result to care for my hair else. Upon inquiring from my friend I found that this lotion consisted of 3 oz. of Lavone (de compose) mixed with 5 oz. of Bay Rum and 1/4 dr. of Menthol Crystals. How any druggist can prepare for such a small sum a lotion so magic in its effects that it grows hair on a bald head is more than I can understand. Yet the fact remains that any good druggist can prepare it, but only by the understanding that great care must be taken not to use it except on the head, for it would be most disastrous to the growth of superfluous hair on the neck or arms where the lotion might fall. NOTE: I publish this formula in The Norwich Bulletin it is only because of my promise that I would make known to the world the secret of this remarkable lotion which has costed so little and at the same time being absolutely certain in its effects. This is the formula: FRANCIS BRONN.

After Frank Hill, former president and now liquidating agent of the bank had a conference with Bank Commissioner George H. Newell. Negotiations are now pending for the sale of the assets of the bank. The success in winding up the affairs of the bank is even in excess of the anticipation of the bank officers. When the liquidation was first undertaken, it was expected that, two, and possibly three payments would have to be made. However, the successful in paying its full indebtedness, but it is now practically certain that full payment will be made at one time to depositors. When the bank suspended business its total assets were $26,600, divided among 211 depositors. Dividends were paid in full up to January 1 of the present year. Therefore the only loss the depositors will sustain is the interest from January up to the time of payment, eleven months. The loss from this source is $1,100, a small sum, as the largest single deposit is $4100, and the great majority of deposits are very much smaller.

There were three separate republican caucuses held in the Westerly town hall, Thursday evening, namely the First and Second representative district caucuses. The delegates to the men, and the general caucus to elect delegates to the state and congressional conventions. The First district caucus was called to order by Dr. Michael H. Scanlon, chairman of the district committee, and was made permanent chairman. Everett A. Kingsley was chosen secretary and Eugene B. Pendleton was chosen chairman, and Arthur L. Perry, secretary. Upon motion of Frank W. Coy these committees were elected: William Clark, Samuel H. Davis, Marshall Stanton, Lewis Stanton, Arthur L. Perry, James McCall, Daniel F. Larkin.

Then came the caucus for the election of delegates to the state and congressional conventions. William Clark, chairman of the town committee, read the call and stated the business to be the election of six delegates to the state convention, six delegates to the Second congressional convention and a town committee. Eugene B. Pendleton was chosen chairman and Arthur L. Perry clerk. The delegates elected to the state convention are Congressman George H. Uter, Arthur L. Perry, Dr. Michael H. Scanlon, Judge Edward M. Burke, Judge John W. Swan, Councilman Maurice W. Flynn. On motion of Everett E. Whipple the delegation was authorized to fill any vacancies that might occur. It was voted that delegates elected to the state convention be also the delegates to the congressional convention, both conventions being held in Providence on the same date. It was also voted that the members of the committee of the First and Second representative districts constitute the town committee.

There were twenty-three republicans present and the three conventions were in session a total of just thirteen minutes.

Notwithstanding the long march, the strenuous drills, and the exhausting din of mimic warfare, many of the soldiers who participated in the manoeuvres of Thursday, slipped by the guards and visited Westerly in the evening. They walked from camp to the trolley station at Westerly, a distance of about three miles, and then boarded trolley cars for Westerly just to see the sights after dark in the thriving village. The soldiers were well behaved and returned to camp by midnight, presumably as stealthily as when they departed without leave a few hours before.
