OVER THE $2,000 MARK.

Subscriptions to United Workers Now $2,111.75—Secured $521 on Wednesday.

The $2,000 mark was passed Wednesday by the donors to the United Workers, when the solicitors made their final reports for the day, as their pledges secured showed a total of $521 on Wednesday, which added to the $1,590 secured the previous two days gave the busy workers the encouraging total sum of $2,111.75. They have thus approached one-third of the total of $3,900 which they are to raise in the present week.

The following were the subscribers on Wednesday: E. R. Root, Walter E. Gilbert, H. A. Tirrell, Frederic W. Cary, Wallace S. Allis, Walter F. Lester, Frederic W. Lester, Platt-Cadden Co., William C. Much of the household sewing for the Rock Nook children's home and the Sheltering Arms is done through the employment bureau and so one department of the United Workers is enabled to help the others.

Large orders have been filled at different times, as is well known to the public as some other departments, but the work which it accomplishes is most useful and benevolent.

LOCAL AND NATIONAL ISSUES

Republican Speakers Discuss Them Before Big Rally in Town Hall—Protective Tariff Has Given Norwich Valuable Industries—Nation Needs No Change From Taft—Senator Brandegee, Gustav D. Carlson of Middletown and Hon. H. H. Gallup the Speakers.

Norwich turned out still one more political rally on Wednesday evening which filled the town hall till a fringe of men stood around the rear of the seats to hear the issues of the campaign discussed by republican speakers. The ladies, too, were largely represented, giving evidence of their interest in the political questions which has been a unique feature of the rallies held this year. They had a reception reserved for them and ushers were on hand to see that they were well seated.

Before the rally at the hall there was a reception at the Watrous home from 7:30 to 8 o'clock for United States Senator Frank B. Brandegee of New London, at which many came in to greet the senator, and during the reception hours Tubbs band played for the pleasure of the big crowd which gathered outside the hotel. The reception committee for the evening comprised John D. Hall, Oliver L. Johnson, John Eccles, Waterman R. Buraham, Henry D. Tirrell, Frank L. Woodard, Charles D. Noyes, William E. Young, F. J. Leavere, John E. Clark, C. H. Frisbie, Judge Lucius Brown, Albert D. Smith, J. W. Gilbert, E. A. Cudworth, A. C. Hatch, Judge N. J. Ayling, A. T. Boom, Currie Gilmour, Hon. H. H. Gallup, John Sawyer, Mr. Allyn L. Brown, Frederic W. Cary, P. J. O'Connell, Vine S. Stetson, Hon. Edwin W. Higgins, James L. Case, Governor Ely, Wallace S. Allis, Henry Hovey.

Parade to the Hall.

At 8 o'clock the band led the way to the town hall, with Senator Brandegee, Hon. H. H. Gallup, Hon. Gustav D. Carlson and two former state treasurers, Hon. H. H. Gallup and Hon. Costello Lippitt, in an automobile at the head of the marchers, who blazed the way with red flags.

The hall the gentlemen named were seated upon the platform with President John D. Hall of the Norwich Republican club and Deputy Dairy Commissioners Taylor and Weston. The audience gave them an enthusiastic greeting by standing as the band played a selection.

Three Speakers.

The speakers were three, each treating different phases of the political questions of the times with marked ability. Mr. Gallup speaking especially upon local conditions, Hon. Gustav D. Carlson of Middletown, republican candidate for secretary of state, reviewing the issues state-wide and nationwide, and Senator Brandegee speaking with the voice of experience gained in legislative affairs in Washington. The three-fold presentation made the meeting an effective one for the cause of the party.

President John D. Hall of the Norwich Republican club, who was chairman, introduced Hon. Henry H. Gallup, former state treasurer, for whom the audience gave them an enthusiastic greeting by standing as the band played a selection.

Campaign of Prime Importance.

This campaign, Mr. Gallup said in opening, he regarded as one of the most important of the times had ever been called to pass through, and of tremendous importance to every man, woman and child. This city is an industrial city, whose welfare depends upon such economic laws as will make it possible for everyone to get the best results from his labor. The progressives, he said, were here with us, but they were led away by the attractive personality of a man, their leader, who, without their knowledge, there would be no progressive party. If Roosevelt was giving the square deal, he would acknowledge that there was no chance of his being elected, and a vote for Roosevelt would be a vote for Wilson, the leader of a party which has been so long out of power that it has no constructive policy.

History Will Be Repeated.

History repeats itself, said Mr. Gallup, and he went on to discuss the panic of 1893, which Mr. Wilson in a recent statement had said was chargeable to the poor policy adopted by a republican majority. Mr. Gallup argued that such was the case, but that in 1894, under the Wilson tariff, business conditions were deplorable and did not revive till the republicans were again in power with the Dingley tariff operating. Mr. Gallup told of the lack of orders under the demagogue, and predicted that such would be the inevitable result throughout the country in the event of the election of Wilson. There would be a slackening in all lines of business, a withholding of orders and the curtailing of manufacturing, which meant shorter hours for the workers and the reduction of wages.

Particularly True of Norwich.

Particularly true would that be here, as in the cotton mills such a large amount of work is done in Norwich. He cited the Bonanza mills as an excellent example of this and dwelt upon what this industry had meant to Taftville under the guidance of John Eccles, who was now one of the Norwich candidates for representative and should be elected next Monday.

There was a burst of applause for the name of Mr. Eccles.

Velvet Mills Brought Here.

Mr. Gallup instanced further that the J. B. Martin Velvet company of France under the Wilson tariff had been selling one million dollars worth of velvets in the United States. These goods were made in France. Under the Dingley protective tariff their sales dropped off 80 per cent. with the result that the company located in Norwich and built up an industry that employs 400 people and has a payroll of $5,000 a week. (Applause.)

The speaker referred also to velvet companies in Williamstown and Stonington, and in one or two other parts of the state, and said that the experience of the velvet companies refuted the statement that the protective tariff made high prices, because the mills here had cut the prices till the product was sold lower than it was in France. Added to that was the fact that wages here were three times what they were in France, which he had on the authority of the owners of the J. B. Martin company.

Need President Taft Again.

To those who were casting their first votes, to those who were under contracts to buy homes, to those who wanted to see their savings bank deposits hold firm, he appealed to vote for the safe, reliable and honest president, Mr. Taft—Honest Bill Taft. We don't care if he doesn't know the first principles of politics, but he is a good business man, and good honest business is good politics, and we need him in the future, as he has saved us here, at home from industrial disasters.

The speaker made an appeal to the women to use their influence with the voters, and he concluded with a final appeal to let well enough alone by voting for William Howard Taft.

Carlson on Connecticut Conditions.

Mr. Carlson acknowledged the enthusiasm with which he was greeted, and said it was an indication of conditions around the state, and he went on to speak particularly of the busy hour of industry which is keeping Connecticut plants working in night shifts, a condition which had been fostered by the real protective tariff. He discussed the increase of wages under the protective tariff, which had been the reason for a great influx of immigration and the development and growth of the country.

Sour Democratic Pudding.

The democratic predictions of 1892-1893 of high wages and low prices for commodities were never realized. The proof of the pudding is in the eating, and if there ever was a sour and doughy pudding it was that democratic concoction of 1893. Soup kitchens and bread lines of those days were pictured, and the speaker read a quotation from Woodrow Wilson's United States History touching upon the industrial depression and lack of employment at that time, ending with resumption of business with the incoming republican administration, after the four years of democracy.

Candidate Carlson pointed his arguments with two apt stories illustrating the value of experience, that brought a laugh.

Demonstration of Tariff.

Taking the manufacture of ploughs as an example, the speaker showed how the greater wage vote here than in England constituted the difference in the price which American manufacturers had to charge for ploughs in excess of English manufacturers, and how the protective tariff to cover this was a necessity to keep going the American plough factory or any other industry which employed similarly situated workers with regard to foreign manufacturers. Without dependence upon the protective tariff, the only course left for the American manufacturer was to cut the price of wages.

Mr. William McKinley, under whom the country revived after the depression of 1893-97, was the signal for a burst of applause. To such a man, he said, we should look to for a change from present conditions of prosperity, the speaker applied the scriptural quotation, "Lord, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Danger from Underwood.

Underwood's statement that he would have the mills of New England in the southland was referred to, alongside with the statement made by the democratic leader, after he had seen the prosperity of the New England mills, that he was no dynamiter.

No More Tom Reillys.

New England cannot afford to have its business prosperity in the hands of a democratic leader from the south, and Connecticut wants to send up more Thomas L. Reillys to hold up the name of the democratic leader in congress.

In conclusion, Mr. Carlson urged his hearers on voting day to look well to their ballot, which was so closely bound up with their welfare for the next four years.

For your own sake and your own benefit, if you believe in the republican party, then uphold it.

Ovation for Senator Brandegee.

The introduction of United States Senator Frank B. Brandegee of New London followed the close of Candidate Carlson's speech, and the senator was given an ovation as he rose to speak.

"I'm a republican from principle," said Senator Brandegee in his opening words, and he went on to say that he believed there had been no time since the Civil war when the success of the party was so essential to the country. For years now a majority of the electors have deliberately chosen the republican party, and it has always made good in whatever crises placed. It carried the old starry banner to success in the days of '61 and stands today for sound money, commercial prosperity, equal rights, social justice and fair play.

Republican Party Capable.

Every four years our millions of people are called upon to declare their choice for national officers, and if it were not for the constitutional provision that calls upon the electors to make this choice there would be no question before the people today. There would be no call for it. Neither in this or any other times has there developed a party so capable as the republican party of administering the affairs of this country.

Senator Brandegee spoke in admiration of what he had heard Candidate Carlson say, declaring that it indicated that the Middletown man was of the proper calibre for representative duty for sound money, commercial prosperity, equal rights, social justice and fair play.

Senator Brandegee endorsed the address which Mr. Gallup had made and went on to describe the government as a big stock company in which each man is a holder of one share. The question now is how do we want to vote our stock? Is the government to prosper or to prosper now, the question is what do we want to do now?

Burden of Proof on the Democrats.

For President Taft, the speaker said.
