BURGLAR WAS THANKFUL FOR INFORMATION FURNISHED Cleaned Up Levine Flat in New York —Mrs. Levine Was Formerly Miss Solomon of This City.

The following item taken from the New York Times of Wednesday is of interest to Norwich people: After being assured by Samuel Levine, a confectioner, that his family were all away from home and would not return until late, a burglar Tuesday entered the Levine apartment over the store at 163 Prospect avenue, Chester Hill, a fashionable residence section of New York, and got away with $1,500 worth of jewelry and clothing. When Mrs. Levine returned last evening she found her wardrobe and jewel boxes unassaulted and a kitchen window leading to the fire escape open. On the kitchen table was a note which read:

A well dressed man about 35 years old called at the store at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and asked Mrs. Levine if his family were at home. Mrs. Levine said they were away and would not return until evening. The man thanked him and went out. The burglar made his way to the roof of the apartment house, and climbing down he fired several shots at Mrs. Levine's apartment through the kitchen.

Mrs. Levine is the daughter of Samuel Solomon of West Main street, and was married to Samuel Levine last fall. Previous to her marriage she was employed as bookkeeper in the office of the Greenleaf train company on North Main street.

REDUCTION OF CUSTOMS OFFICERS IN STATE

Strengthening of Republican Economy Would Consolidate Five Offices into One.

Democrats who may have contemplated the change in the patronage system of the custom houses of the state will be interested in a despatch from Washington, the author of which professes to have information that there is to be but one custom officer for the entire state, instead of five, as now. The plan is now under consideration by President Taft and the treasury officials.

The five collectors now are at Bridgeport, Hartford, New Haven, London and Stonington. The plan contemplates the establishment of one main collector's office, probably at Bridgeport, and four sub-collectors' offices at the other four and possibly some ports in charge of deputy collectors. The extension of this consolidation plan to the entire country, it is estimated, is to bring about a saving of about $1,000,000 a year.

The plan for the consolidation started with the democratic majority in the house. During the session of congress before the last election, when the democrats wanted to establish an economy record, the democratic majority in the house passed legislation directing the president to bring about a reorganization and consolidation of the custom houses of the country.

Because of the protests against the plan already outlined, President Taft is likely to let the whole matter go until after March 4, when Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey will have to struggle with the problem.

Democratic members of the house who think economy above patronage are talking about taking some more drastic action than the whole scheme will be dropped. That would relieve Mr. Wilson from the problem and would put the blame for failing to bring about economy up to Mr. Taft.
