POSSIBLE CLUE TO POSTOFFICE TRAGEDY.
The first clue, which may not prove to be a clue, to the postoffice burglary and murder which occurred here two months ago was received in the shape of a clipping from a Boston daily paper, sent to Postmaster W. E. Brown by his son-in-law, R. R. Barber, of Westminster, Vt. The clipping told the story of the capture April 16 in Albany, N. Y., of three tough characters, Massachusetts Mack, Irish Jimmy and Chicago Jack, the first of whom had been shadowed by Postoffice Inspector Robertson ever since the postoffice burglary at North Abington, Mass., in 1911. Inspector Robertson has been certain of the whereabouts of the gang for several months, and he gave his opinion that the men might possibly be connected with the crime committed in Jewett City on the morning of Feb. 15. The prisoners were taken to Boston.

It is hoped that there may be something learned by the police that will bear upon the local tragedy.
