STRONGLY OPPOSE TO RECOGNITION

President Wilson of Opinion That Great Moral Question is Involved in Mexican Situation

NOT IMPRESSED BY AMBASSADOR'S STATEMENT

Democratic Senators Supporting the President's Views—Senator Bacon Declares that Recognition Would Place a Premium on Revolution in Mexico—Administration Still Hopeful That Huerta May Retire from Presidency

Washington, July 31.—President Wilson made it clear today to those who discussed the Mexican situation with him that he had not been satisfied in the least by the arguments of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson in favor of recognition of the Huerta government in Mexico. He let it be known that his analysis of conditions from official and unofficial reports and his judgment of the situation had not been altered by the ambassador's statements.

The president is formulating a policy which he feels is necessary in view of the fact that he has not yet announced whether he will recognize Huerta through the events in which President and Vice President are met tragic deaths.

It developed today that the democratic side in the senate was concurred in this view and further discussion of Ambassador Wilson's statement before the senate foreign relations committee brought out a general sentiment of opposition to the recognition of Huerta through the events in which President and Vice President are met tragic deaths.

Senator Bacon questioned the views of President Wilson who had had from the beginning the pronounced opinion that a great moral question was involved, greater than the question of the acts of a single ruler. In his Latin-American statement issued shortly after inauguration, the president announced that the American government would prefer in its association with those governments which were founded on law and order.

Probable Work of Expert Gang

DETECTIVES' THEORY OF JEWEL ROBERIES. EL ROBERIES. SERVANTS WERE USED. Believed to Have Innocently Aided Crooks by Giving Information—String of India Pearls Left Behind.

Narragansett Pier, R. I., July 31.—The jewels stolen from the summer homes of Charles Cary Rumsey and John H. Hanan are being sought in New York, Boston and other cities where big transactions in precious stones are common. Large dealers in diamonds have been cautioned against dealing with strangers who have jewelry of great value for sale.

This move is taken to indicate a belief that the thieves have left town with their booty and have covered their immediate tracks. It is believed, however, that they will not long resist the temptation to realize on their loot. The police throughout the country have been asked to watch the pawn shops, but no progress has been made from this source. The detectives are pretty well satisfied that the robbers are the work of an expert gang who are too shrewd to do business with pawn shops and who depend rather on making sales to large houses dealing in gems on such a scale that their sales would not attract attention.

Detective Learns Something. But one clue of seeming importance has been developed. That has to do with the mysterious automobile seen on Ocean road Saturday night. After learning what he could about this car, one of the detectives engaged by Mrs. Hanan for New York yesterday before going he called upon Mrs. Hanan at "Shore Acres" and told her that he had discovered something very important, but he didn't say what it was.

"The detectives," said Mrs. Hanan later, "are as much of a puzzle to me as the other things were." She said the first word that she had heard from the detectives was the assurance from the operative today that he had learned something of the whereabouts of the car and was going to New York at once.

Servants Innocent Agents of Crooks. The heretofore divergent views of those who were robbed and the detectives come together in something like a harmonious understanding for the first time today. This was an agreement that the persons were members of a notorious band who were assisted unwittingly by thieves in the course of their robberies. The theory does not raise suspicion to any of the servants, but it does indicate that they may have been innocent agents of the crooks.

When the detectives began work on the Hanan case yesterday, they were told that it was an "inside" job. But when a day later the Rumsey cottage was entered the police modified their views and thought that they saw the hand of the experienced thief.

Servants Made Acquaintances. At the same time Mrs. Hanan refused to entertain a suspicion against the 22 servants in their employ, all of whom were with the cottage at the time of the robbery. Mrs. Hanan pointed out tonight that the thieves pushed a magnificent string of India pearls which could have been disposed of without attracting attention and quite likely suspicion.

REVENGE INSPIRES A MURDER AT BRIDGEPORT. Street Foreman Refuses to Permit Daughter to Wed Relative. Bridgeport, Conn., July 31.—That the murder of Street Foreman Nicholas Biafere, who was shot and killed by one of his laborers, Joseph Morano, at his home in Bridgeport, was a revenge for his discharge of Morano earlier in his day, has behind it a plot for revenge against Biafere for not consenting to the marriage of his daughter with a relative is the theory of the police tonight. They are now bending their efforts to locate the murderer and Anthony Biafere, a relative, who is thought to be connected with the murder.

A few days ago Biafere received a blackletter letter in which his death was threatened and in which perdition was being threatened to Biafere if he did not connect with Anthony Biafere with it. Morano, the murderer, and young Biafere were close friends and were said to have been together after nightfall. Biafere, the younger, is said to have sought revenge on the other and it is believed that he met up with Morano after his discharge and fostered his anger until he went back and shot the foreman.

Biafere had discharged Morano for coming to work late and told him to come for his money tomorrow. Morano returned at noon and when he was again refused his pay shot Biafere and escaped. He is still at liberty. Coroner Phelan took up the inquest tonight and examined several witnesses, who were seated beside Biafere when he was shot. They threw no additional light on the affair and the inquest was adjourned until tomorrow morning.
