Brandtge Against "Scaring" Railroad. Strong opposition developed Friday in the senate at Washington to the passage of the Leach resolution to appoint a special committee of the senators to co-operate with the Interstate Commerce commission in its investigation of the affairs of the Louisville and Nashville railroad and its allied lines.

The railroad resolution of the senate in the premiss led to prolonged discussion and leave-of-absence action on the resolution.

"While of this railroad may be as guilty as hell," said Senator Brandtge of Connecticut, "and perhaps they should be hung as high as Haman, but I am against such extraordinary proceedings as this resolution contemplates."

The railroad company had a right to refuse the inspection of privileged communications, and it could suspend the same delay through the courts unless the senate committee set against the interstate commerce commission. It seems to me that this is a claim of infringement of patent for a machine feeding sheets of silk.

MADE LAND AT ORIENT POINT

Eleven Persons Safe Ashore After Fearful Experience on Drifting Barges—Four Broke from Tow Near Bartlett's Reef—Sank One After Another—In Overcrowded Dory Struggle Continues to Keep Afloat.

An Associated Press dispatch from New York Sunday night said: Long distance telephone calls from Orient Point, at the eastern end of Long Island, told today of the safety of eleven persons, including four women and two children, who were on the four barges which were cut loose from the tow of the tug Plym in the storm of Friday night.

The heavy seas which threatened to swamp the small boat against the sides of the barges. One by one the other barges broke away from the tug and finally sank, the staunchest of the lot, began to fill.

Then all were successfully transferred to the dory once more. The little craft was so weighted down by the floating debris crowded into it that the gunwales were dangerously near the water and the occupants were frequently splashed with the waves.

Hoped to Reach Connecticut Side. When the party boarded the dory they took the Connecticut shore of the Long Island and hoped to make the former, but the wind and tide were so strong against them that they found this impossible.

When the air cleared and it was possible to see some distance, neither the life savers nor the rescued were able to sight the Woods, and it is supposed that barges sank also.

At the life saving station the rescued were given dry clothing and food and medical attendance. It was feared at the station that the rescued would be fatally for the two little children but at the Latham home it was said tonight that they seemed entirely well.

RECAPTURED HEIFERS IN TOOL SHED TRAP

Two Belonging to Moosup Valley Farmer Had Gone "Back to Nature."

After having eluded capture for several months two valuable heifers belonging to Arthur Hoadley of Moosup Valley were captured at Sterling last week in an empty tool shed fitted up as a trap by H. Hoadley, formerly of New Haven, who is manager of a farm in North Sterling.

The animals were so wild that it was impossible to handle them with safety. Numerous attempts had been made to catch them and some two Stankstone hounds had been set on their trail in an effort to tire them out.

Mr. Hoadley conceived the idea of trapping them, and to that end made a large pen six feet in height, with a swinging gate, so arranged that when a rope on which some "bait" had been placed was pulled, the gate would close.

The first night the "trap" was set it actually caught one of the cattle, but when an attempt was made to throw a rope around her head she cleared the six foot fence in one leap and made for the woods to rejoin her companion.

It was thought that the second night would make them wary, but Mr. Hoadley repeated his former tactics of placing a line of traps from the woods to the barn, and after about a week the two heifers recaptured.

The door of the shed was closed and the animals were kept in the shed for several days until they were nearly two hours to secure the animals, so well developed had their "back to nature" proclivities become.
