The designation of April 17 as Arbor day by Governor Baldwin is in accordance with the statutory provision for a day for the encouragement of tree planting.

For the most part Arbor day has been left to the schools and the school children for the manifestation of the proper enthusiasm.

The spirit of Arbor day can be carried out with magnificent results in most every community.

One of the most important declarations which have been made in connection with the movement which has been undertaken for the getting together of the republican party.

It is an ill wind which blows no one. The friendless English sparrows are now being transformed into canaries by means of yellow dye.

It is about time someone suggested the watchful waiting policy to the British government. That is supposed to let most anything settle itself.

The man on the corner says: To beautify the town make something grow. Planting yourself in a porch swing won't answer the purpose.

College girls are doing their best in coming to the aid of Wellesley but the most they can do is to be an inspiration to those who can do so much more with less effort.

How much out of season work has to be done is illustrated by the western railroad making preparations to move the fall crops while most every one is busy anticipating the spring planting.

When President Wilson brushed aside the required civil service examination for that Princeton graduate, he established a precedent which the granddaughter of President Tyler ought to make good use of.

History certainly repeats itself many times. Not only is the talk of a canal to Worcester revived but the demand for a drawbridge over the Yantic is again on the carpet.

confidence of the depositors could not be so glaringly outraged. The people need to be protected from it the same as from a swindle.

HELP THE CUTTER SERVICE. While the question of making greater use of the vessels of the navy is being urged by Senator Weeks of Massachusetts it must be realized that he has hit upon a matter which will win extensive approval.

Though it is possible to offer numerous objections to such an undertaking when it is suggested that they be used in the steamship business, because of the construction, the expense of operation and their general unfitness for such work, it is not too much to believe that they can be made excellent use of during the winter season in particular.

There are cutters in this service which are comparatively new vessels and well prepared for the work required, but there are others which are not and in the saving of life and limb at sea they are called upon many times for heroic service.
