HOLIDAY QUIET IN WESTERLY

Siren of Rebuilt Motor-Driven Fire Truck Heard for the First Time—Bandits at Bradford Hold Up Three Men and Shoot at a Fourth.

The Fourth of July was observed in Westery along the same lines as on any other holiday, by a general suspension of business and a day of recreation. It was a safe and sane celebration—the day after as well as the night before and the day itself. The usual peace and quiet was not even disturbed by the discharge of revolvers or the explosion of firecrackers, for the laws regulating the old-time noise-making celebration were strictly observed. There was, however, on the morning of July Fourth, when the siren of a motor-driven fire apparatus was heard for the first time in Westery, and it attracted much attention among those congregated in Dixon square. It was the machine from Marlboro that was rebuilt from the cyclone chemical and hose wagon into a motor-driven apparatus to be the first for the department of the Westery fire district. The machine came down High street, with siren blowing, and was going at a 35 mile an hour clip. It swished through Dixon square and made a quick turn up Union street to the fire house. There the apparatus was closely inspected and the general opinion was that it was a thing of beauty as well as of thorough efficiency.

Chief Samuel G. Cottrell, Assistant Chief Harry Cope and James Maswell, who is to be taught as one of the drivers, went to Providence by railroad, where the demonstrator met them with the machine and started on the return trip to Westery. This trip was made without a hitch. The run was considered a satisfactory test, the distance and the general conditions being more than will ever be required from the apparatus in fire duty in Westery. Just as soon as the machine was given a needed washing, after the long run from Marlboro, Mass., hose was placed in position and the motor-driven apparatus was practically in commission, with the demonstrator in charge, in readiness to give instructions to the men who will run the machine.

The apparatus that arrived on July Fourth is the Cyclone combination wagon converted into the motor-driven class, the body, chemical tank, hose basket, hand rail, lanterns, etc., being used in the reconstruction, and thereby the heavy lines of the old wagon are retained. The body is not as deep as used in modern apparatus, but is ample for 1,000 feet of fire hose. The Westery fire district in addition to this combination wagon ordered a motor-driven hose wagon in Marlboro. This will be entirely new and is expected to arrive within two weeks and will be assigned to the Rhode Island One's. The chassis of the two machines are identical and are said to be of ample power for all service required. The lines are of the pneumatic order, with single in the rear as in the front, which is believed to be adequate for the service, as there are but few fire alarms in Westery.

The fire district made an appropriation of $6,000 for the conversion of the two horse-drawn wagons into motor-driven apparatus, but the committee for the sum of $1,000 less purchased an entirely new machine and had the combination wagon satisfactorily converted. Westery fire district has now a finely equipped department, as good as there is in any other place of the size, and the men of the department are ever ready to give the very best possible service.

There are at least three bold and bad men resident in the Bradford section of the town of Westery, for it is the general belief that they are the same who robbed David Newell of his payroll of his granite industry to the amount of $2,300 about three years ago, and who more recently, upon being disappointed in not connecting with the payroll of the Crumb quarry, set fire to one of the main buildings covering much valuable machinery, which resulted in the loss of about $13,000. It is also believed that it was this same trio who committed the robbery of the money chest in Bradford early Friday evening. The bandits took up position alongside a narrow path in the woods over which the quarrymen used to make the trip, and from their homes and the quarry as a short cut from the main highway. As the men came along this narrow path in the thick woods, walking Indian file and considerable distance apart, the three bandits appeared, wearing black masks and carrying black bands. With revolvers in hand they first held up Charles Puccio, telling him in his native tongue that if he made any noise they would shoot him. To the demand for money Puccio said he had none, as payday was on Thursday and he had no money on the Fourth, Friday being the regular payday. Puccio was searched and ordered to go on home and was threatened with death if he turned back or made any outcry.

Joseph Vero was the next to come along, and he was held up and relieved of the money he carried, and ordered to proceed under penalty of death. Next came Sondi Minthro, and from him the bandits took $10, and he was ordered to proceed. Then came Michael Caspabo, who told the bandits he had no money and expostulated with them in loud tones, that brought threats from the bandits in tones equally as loud. This loud talk attracted the attention of the policeman Vero, who was cutting brush with an axe over the path that had been traveled by the men that were being held up. Vero, with axe in hand, immediately started down the path. When he came within hailing distance he demanded to know what the trouble was, swinging the axe as he proceeded. He advanced but a few steps farther when four shots were fired, one of the bullets taking effect in the right leg about midway between the knee and thigh. The masked bandits then made their escape, and the policeman who was shot, was taken to his home and attended by Dr. Marr, but the bullet could not be located. He was subsequently taken to the Rhode Island hospital, where, with the aid of the X-ray, the bullet was located and extracted.

Chief of Police Brown was notified of the holdups and shooting and with several other officers went to Bradford in automobiles and searched the woods and highways for the bandits. The bids for the supply of coal to the state institutions were opened on Friday by the state board of control and supply at the office of the board in Providence, but the awarding of the contract was withheld until the next meeting, which will be held on Monday. Bidders are Oscar H. Tefft of Westery, R. I., R. N. Hartwell & Son, Boston, M. L. Cobb, Boston, Eastern Coal company of Providence, United Coal company of Providence and Maryland Coal and Coke company of Boston.

WEDDING.

Hoxsie—Langworthy. On Saturday evening, June 27th the usually quiet village of Bradford, R. I. was treated to a pretty wedding scene when Elizabeth E. Langworthy of that place became the wife of Joseph Hoxsie of the Watch Hill Life Saving station. The home of the bride had been tastefully decorated, with many played by Miss Edith Hoxsie. It was led by Charles Andrews, who was best man, and Miss Carrie Simpson, bridesmaid, followed by the bride. The bride wore a gown of white satin and shadow lace, with veil and train. The bridesmaids were given, ice cream, cake and punch were served. Nearly one hundred guests were present from Hope Valley, Montville, Westery, Quonochontong, Ashaway and Tomsquaque, and many valuable and useful presents were on exhibition, including silver, cut glass, linen and china.

The bride's traveling suit of wood brown. Mr. and Mrs. Hoxsie left on the 8.45 train for their wedding trip and wish the best wishes from their friends for a long life of health and happiness.

Henry Jarvis of Glasgow has Leg Bones Broken when Gun Barrel Explodes—Shell Wounds Robert Olsen.

Henry Jarvis of Glasgow met with a serious accident Saturday night about a quarter to seven. He went out with an old gun to shoot a woodchuck, when the barrel fell off the stock. It struck the ground at an angle and exploded, the shot making a hole in Jarvis' leg and breaking both bones almost to pieces. About forty shot were imbedded in the other leg. He was taken to Baekus hospital, after being treated by a Jewett City doctor.

Boy Wounded by Shell. Robert Olsen was struck in the leg by the shell flying back from a bullet, Saturday. Another boy placed a bullet in the street and threw a stone upon it, exploding it. The shell struck young Olsen in the leg, inflicting a bad wound.
