burn, just before Drury square is reached, she said an automobile came around the turn and that it was going quite fast.

Miss Murphy said the motorcycle was on the right side of the road, and that when the auto turned the bend it came on the motorcycle unawares. Mr. Earnshaw turned out further to the right side of the road, and in doing so, the machine went down the slight grade on the side of the road.

Automobile Driver to Blame. The auto had taken more than its share of the road, according to Miss Murphy, and after they passed, Mr. Earnshaw attempted to get into the road again. It is thought that he put on more power in order to get up a clear way, and that the machine jumped. Miss Murphy was thrown out of the sidecar when the accident happened and never gave a clear statement as to what caused Earnshaw's death.

Machine Had Ploughed Along. The tracks of the motorcycle were plainly apparent when the Worcester police ambulance got there, and it was seen that it had been forced into the side of the road. Just about 30 feet from where the body of Earnshaw was run up from beneath the motorcycle, there were tracks in the road, where some part of the machine had scraped along.

There were three places where the motorcycle made deep marks in the road, as it ploughed along, undoubtedly in a position to overturning. Where the machine was picked up, there was a puddle of blood.

Fred Brayman, who lives in a house about 25 yards from where the accident happened, was standing on the porch of the Murphy girl as she ran up the road after being thrown from the side-car. He went to the spot where Earnshaw was lying and with the aid of L. O. Irish, one of the Auburn policemen, who came along at that time, he was taken from the road and laid in the grass on the nearby bank.

Alive When Picked Up. Mr. Brayman could give little information as to how the accident happened. He said that Earnshaw was always when he picked him up, but that he had been hearing from the man's mouth. He died about 30 minutes after the accident.

Five representatives of the Massachusetts highway commission on their way to Oxford came along just as the police ambulance arrived and they took the story told by Miss Murphy and Mr. Brayman.

The body was brought to city hospital morgue in the police ambulance, and an examination showed that Earnshaw had received a compound fracture of the skull. In his pocket the police found a gold watch and a $5 in money.

Miss Murphy was taken by Selectman Irish to the home of her aunt, where she and Earnshaw were headed for when the accident happened. Miss Murphy said the automobile did not sound any signal when making the turn, but Earnshaw sounded his horn shortly before reaching the turn.

Walter H. Earnshaw was born in England 34 years ago, the son of Ellis and Harriet E. Earnshaw. He father was for a long time superintendent of the Fisher Manufacturing Co. mill at Fisherville and it was under him that Walter learned the cotton business. For two years Walter has been overseer of carding at the mill of the Manchester Manufacturing Co., Putnam. It has been his custom every week-end to pass every other week-end with his mother at Fisherville, and it was while on his way there that the accident occurred which ended his life. Mr. Earnshaw has been an enthusiastic motorcyclist for a long time, and for several years has been president and captain of the Rhode Island motorcycle club. Besides his mother Mr. Earnshaw is survived by two brothers, Charles H. Fisherville and George Earnshaw, Columbus, Ohio.
