BRITISH HAVE SUNK THE GERMAN CRUISER NURNBERG.
Action in Which the Three Cruisers Were Sunk Lasted Five Hours.

London, Dec. 10, 7.48 p. m.—The official bureau announces this afternoon that the German cruiser Nurnberg, one of the warships which escaped from the British in the engagement of Dec. 8, has been sunk.

The text of the official bureau statement reads: "A further telegram has been received from Vice Admiral Sir Frederick Doveton Sturdee, reporting that the Nurnberg was also sunk on Dec. 8 and that the search for the Dresden is still proceeding.

"The action lasted for 2 1/2 hours with intervals. The Scharnhorst sank after three hours and the Gneisenau two hours later. The enemy's light cruisers scattered and were chased by our cruisers and light cruisers.

"No loss of any British vessel is reported.

The Nurnberg was one of the German squadron which was defeated off the Falkland Islands by the British warships on Dec. 8. She had a displacement of 2,450 tons and a complement of 250 men. Her length on the water line was 245 feet and her beam 42 feet. She carried ten 4.1 inch guns, eight 5-pounders, four machine guns and two torpedo tubes.

Announcement of the sinking of the Nurnberg leaves only the cruiser Dresden to be accounted for of the five warships in the German squadron. The last word of the Dresden, which is a sister ship of the famous cruiser Emden, was that she was being pursued by the British ships and was being pursued.
