RUSSIANS TO MAKE STAIR AT GALLICIA

Along Its Course in Galicia the Army of Grand Duke Nicholas Has Taken Strong Positions

TEUTONS TAKE IMPORTANT TOWN OF TOMASZOW

Austro-German Troops Continue Sweeping Movement in the Northeast in an Effort to Capture Polish Capital—Reports From the Western Zone Are Strangely Quiet—Montenegrins Have Occupied Scutari, Albania—Premier Asquith Has Appealed to People to Subscribe to the New War Loan.

The Russians are now making their stand on the Bug River. This great stream, which offers many advantages for a strong defence, rises near Zlocow in Galicia, runs almost north, forms a great part of the eastern frontier of Russian Poland and joins the Vistula eighteen miles northwest of Warsaw. It is along its Gallician course that the army of Grand Duke Nicholas is believed to have taken up strong positions, the loss of which would mean the further retirement of the Russian forces.

Russians Driven Back

Already the Austro-Germans have pushed the Russians back to the Bug River near Kamionka, northeast of Lemberg and further north have penetrated Russian Poland, capturing the important town of Tomaszow; they have also, according to the official report from Vienna, driven the Russians holding ground near Solec, northward as far as Krystanow, a distance of about eight miles, and have taken Burstin, north of Halicz. In fact, the masses of Austrian and German troops are marching along their entire front in the southeast, forcing the Russians before them in a broad sweeping movement and in the north-east pushing forward, with Warsaw, the Polish capital, as their objective.

Montenegrins in Albania

An interesting incident of the war is the occupation of Scutari, Albania, by the Montenegrins. In the Balkan War, the Montenegrin troops captured Scutari, after a long siege and held it for a time against the protests of Austria and Italy being mostly concerned—but its evacuation was ordered by King Nicholas when the Montenegrin coast was blockaded by an international naval squadron. Serbia had already sent troops into Albania when the Montenegrins decided to make a second attempt on Scutari, which has long been an object of her desire.

Quiet in Western Zone

The western zone is strangely quiet. Although the sector in which Arras is situated is still the scene of French efforts to gain ground, which in the final accounting would prove of immeasurable value to them, and fighting also has been going on in the Vosges, where the Germans captured positions held by the French on the night of the 22nd, the French are reported to have them re-taken, there are great stretches of the Franco-Belgian front, which to the uninitiated are characterized by a somewhat mysterious inactivity. This has been particularly noticeable of late with reference to the sector held by the British troops.

The grenadiers, says the newspaper, approached a within fifty yards of the entrenched enemy when, with the cry of "Eavoy" they sprang with fixed bayonet on the Austrians, who broke and fled.

A shower of artillery obliged the remnants to change their position to protect themselves.
