KWONG NING IS FOUND GUILTY

Jury Deliberated Over Two Hours on New London Chinaman's Case—He Will be Sentenced Today—Abraham Bronstein's Probation is Extended for Six Months—Two Norwich People Given Jail Sentences.

It took the jury in the superior court here on Wednesday, two hours and five minutes to reach their verdict in the case of Kwong Ning, a Chinese laundryman of New London, accused of murdering Mary Shepley, a 13-year-old daughter of Max Sntiklin.

At 4.15 in the afternoon they returned to the court room and Foreman William C. Sherman answered the formal question of Clerk George E. Parsons by saying that they found Kwong Ning guilty. As far as could be ascertained the verdict made reference to the 58-year-old prisoner in the pen, if indeed he understood it, as he remained impassive throughout and marched to jail at the end of the chain gang after court without showing any emotion.

States Attorney Hadial A. Hull said he would not ask to have sentence pronounced Wednesday and Judge Williams announced that sentence would be deferred. Court then adjourned until 10 o'clock the next morning.

All the morning session of the court on Wednesday was occupied with the two concluding arguments and the judge's charge. Attorney John Q. Geary spoke for a little over an hour in behalf of the accused through the state's attorney followed his argument for the prosecution which occupied about an hour and twenty minutes.
