ALIMONY FOR EAST LYME WOMAN

And $1,250 Alimony for Elva Newell Atwood in Decree From Philo C. Atwood of Willimantic—After Conference Case Was Not Contested—Grounds Were Intolerable Cruelty.

Elva Newell Atwood of East Lyme was granted a divorce from Philo C. Atwood of Willimantic by Judge Milton A. Shumway in the superior court in New London on Tuesday. The divorce was granted on the ground of intolerable cruelty, and she was also given $1,250 alimony.

The suit was heard before Judge Shumway, but after a conference between attorneys, which lasted all the morning, the case was adjourned to Tuesday. It was not contested by the defendant. Mrs. Atwood testified that her husband tried to make her do housework when she was ill and unable to work. He choked her, she said, and wouldn't give her enough to eat.

She introduced three witnesses who testified to intolerable cruelty to Mrs. Atwood by her husband. Judge Shumway granted the divorce after hearing the testimony, and ordered the husband to pay his wife $1,250 alimony before Nov. 1. They were married Jan. 25, 1895, and the cruelty is alleged to have begun Jan. 1, 1913.

There is another suit pending in which Mrs. Atwood asks for a partition of property in which she claims to have an interest. The property includes a house valued at $4,000. Attorneys Hall, McGuire and Hull and Clayton E. Smith appeared for the plaintiff and attorneys Cape and Harvey of Willimantic represented the defendant.
