YALE COMMITTEE POSTPONES SELECTION OF COACH.

Four Candidates Under Consideration by Special Athletic Board.

The investigation of Yale's football troubles, which is now being made by the committee composed of Vance McCormick, John R. Kilpatrick and S. B. Thorne, is progressing slowly. It had been hoped that the committee would be able to make a report before college closed for the holiday recess, but the failure of the committee to reach any decision at its meetings in New York last week will probably postpone the selection of a head coach until after the holidays.

Although the committee has been very secretive about its deliberations what little has leaked out is changing the guessing as to who will fill the important position in Yale football. Before the committee was organized to business the sentiment of the graduates seemed to be strongly in favor of Dr. "Al" Sharpe. Then Foster Sanford men became active and boomed Sanford persistently and in fact are still booming him. When it became known that Sharpe was tied up for five years with Cornell Sanford's chances became brighter.

SYSTEM FOUNDED ON EFFICIENCY

Houghton Originator of Crimson's Football Machine—Took Five Years to Lay Foundation and Three to Show That No Other Could Equal It.

Harvard needs Houghton in 1916 more than she has during the past four years. With a squad lacking any individual stars among the backs, and with but one star line-man, the Crimson's great hope lies in Houghton as head of the system which he has built during the past eight years—this system which is part of Harvard's football but which needs its originator at the head.

Team Football. Houghton football means "team" football, and the individual stars are but stepping stones to the highest point of efficiency that can be reached.

Percy D. Houghton has laid the foundation of a system which the greatest of possible efficiency can be reached, and this is why Harvard teams are generally superior to other elevens. That is why even with the somewhat poorer class of material that will be available for 1916, Coach Houghton will be able to put a team on the field for the big games that will work just as smoothly and probably just as powerfully as the one this year.

There are three items in football systems—one which plays up the individual and builds the teams about him, and the other two which are individual to team work. Both are obviously inefficient. The system which D. Houghton uses at Harvard takes the team as a whole and makes it work as one unit.

It is not a "one man" Harvard team, there is no "one man" system. Houghton's system is based on the ability of knowing which men are valuable, and which ideas are important. He throws out the rubbish and keeps the things which will count.

This is why it took at least five years to build up the system, based as it was on efficiency of not only the men but the coaches. There is not a man in the last year of the first five, and then in the three-year period covering the last year of the first five, and then in the three-year period covering the last year of the first five, and then in the three-year period covering the last year of the first five.

Five Years to Lay Foundation. It took five years to lay the foundations of this system and three to show that it was efficient.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET MODERATELY ACTIVE. Dealings Were Fairly Large and Broad, With Prices Higher.

New York, Dec. 24.—Less than the usual holiday apathy pervaded today's market, dealings being fairly large and broad, with prices generally higher.

Railroad shares were plainly helped by the overnight decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission which granted increased freight rates for many important commodities to carriers in western and southwestern territory.

Oil and automobile issues were under restraint resulting from further postponement of the proposed new General Motors showing marked weakness, but many of the losses were made in the afternoon.

War bonds were active and boomed in narrow limits, but mostly higher. Extreme dullness prevailed in the final hour, with the term of the bonds.

Total sales amounted to $83,000,000. The few noteworthy features of the session was the steady outpouring of Anglo-French bonds, which were offered in blocks up to $500,000.

Private cables from London indicated a continuance of private liquidation of American securities, prior to the completion of the plans of the bank.

The bank statement, published a day in advance because of the holiday disclosed only a moderate actual increase in deposits.

Bonds in general reflected the irregular trend of the Anglo-French issue. Total sales, par value, aggregated $5,225,000.

S. bonds were unchanged on call.

man among them who might be called a star.

Harvard needs this efficiency system more than ever before. The system carries the ball or offers interference. His job is to think from the beginning of the game to the end.

The idea of efficiency is at the base of every good football team and the difference comes when it is at the very bottom, as it is at Harvard. A man may be a star and yet be useless to Houghton without certain training and certain changes in the playing of every other man on the team.

During the first five years that Coach Houghton was in charge Harvard lost to Yale once, was tied twice and won twice. That is not exactly a wonderful record, but when it is understood that previous to this time Harvard had very little glory on the gridiron as compared to Yale, for the six years previous to 1910, when P. D. Houghton took charge, Yale had defeated Harvard without allowing the latter to score.

In the 29 games which had been played Harvard had won but four while Yale was victorious in 21. Three had been ties, and was forfeited. Since Houghton took charge Yale has won more than doubled her number of victories.

Complete and Efficient. During the five-year period Houghton was building up his system. So complete and efficient is that it cannot be complete until at least this number of years had passed. It was not merely a case of teaching the players the game as he understood it, but of teaching his coaches the game, and then the coaches to teach the players.

And when Percy Houghton retired, he left a system which was more than a "one man" Harvard team, there is no "one man" system. Houghton's system is based on the ability of knowing which men are valuable, and which ideas are important.
