The Magnitude of Their Business Interests Clearly Shown

In securing the figures shown herewith The Bulletin is indebted to the custodians of the accounts, and thanks them for their prompt and obliging responses. Except in a few instances there was a ready response from those approached for information, but where estimates had to be made, they carefully figured.

The greater part of the figures were based upon amounts actually taken from the books of the business houses. The promise to disclose no business secrets will explain why in a number of instances it has been necessary to assemble several lines into one sum. The immense figures reached must be a surprise to all as it is to The Bulletin, and the residents of the cities and towns of the two counties can well feel a padonable pride in the magnitude of their business interests as here shown.
