ALLIES ABANDON THE GALLIOLI PENINSULA

Complete Evacuation Effected With the Wounding of Only One Man

BRITISH PEOPLE RECEIVED NEWS WITH REGRET

Turkish Batteries Had Been Drawing in and Concentrating on Positions the Allies Have Withdrawn From—British Battleship King Edward VII, One of the Finest of the Last Class of Pre-Dreadnoughts, Has Been Blown Up by a Mine—Entire Crew Was Saved—No Developments of Importance Are Reported From Either the West or East Fronts—Greek Correspondents Continue to Assert That the Bulgarians and Germans Are Planning an Attack on Saloniki.

London, Jan. 9, 10.26 p. m.—The remaining positions held by the allies on Gallipoli peninsula have now been abandoned with the wounding of only one man among the British and French, according to a British official statement issued tonight.

This news has been expected for several days by the keen observers of the near eastern campaign, for the retirement of the troops from Anzac and Suvla Bay three weeks ago left no strategic advantage to the retention of the tip of the peninsula. Nevertheless, the news was received with regret by the people of the British Isles as well as the colonies.

Renewed activity of various kinds noted by the Turkish official communications in the past few days has presumably been in the nature of preparations for the final act of the Dardanelles campaign. The Turkish official statement, covering the period from Thursday to Saturday, records that in consequence of the reinforcements, Turkish batteries have been drawing in and concentrating on the allied remaining positions.

Another pang to the British public will be caused by the announcement tonight of the loss of the battleship King Edward VII, which has been blown up by a mine. The brief official statement on this subject does not reveal the scene of the disaster, which merely says that the disaster occurred in a heavy sea, despite that the entire crew was saved before the ship went down.

British Battleship Sunk. The King Edward VII represented an investment of nearly $1,500,000 and was one of the finest of the last class of pre-dreadnoughts corresponding in general to the American ships of the New Jersey and Nebraska type, and was only slightly larger than the vessel which was sunk by an internal explosion about a week ago.

No developments of importance. On the west and east fronts there have been no developments of large importance over the week end. The German communication announced the recapture of positions on Hartmanns-Werksploeg taken by the French a few days before Christmas.

Greek correspondents continue to assert that the Bulgarians and Germans are hastening plans for an attack on Saloniki. But are still on a collision course with the Russians and Montenegrins and the Bulgarians are largely occupied in a resolute attempt to reach the Adriatic, from which they are only forty miles distant at Elbasan, Albania.

England's Internal Affairs Quiet. England's internal affairs are quiet, pending the reassembling of parliament. There will be night debate on the compulsory bill Tuesday night. David Lloyd George, minister of munitions, and Arthur Henderson, labor minister, who has just resigned from the cabinet, as the probable speakers. Sir Henry Dalziel, who has been one of the most consistent critics of the government, is expected to give his reasons why he supports the government on this matter.

The labor party will meet early in the week to consider its position. Unless, however, opposition to the bill develops, a strength of which there is no indication, the government will likely need to appeal to the country.

LONDON SUFFRAGETTES HELD A DEMONSTRATION in Hyde Park to Protest Against the Compulsion Bill.

London, Jan. 9, 9.14 p. m.—Suffragettes held a demonstration in Hyde Park today to protest against the compulsion bill. Addresses were made by numerous speakers, male and female, and the crowd gathered around which large crowds gathered.

There was considerable heckling of the speakers from the crowd, and after the beginning of the suffragette demonstration a group of men wearing derby hats and carrying a counter-meeting near by, where speeches in favor of compulsion continued as long as the suffragette speakers held out. The crowd was in good humor and the meetings broke up without any violence after the suffragettes had passed a resolution against compulsion and industrial compulsion and demanding a more democratic form of government in which the women shall have a voice.

SIX N. H. ROAD DIRECTORS ACQUITTED

Jury Disagreed in the Case of Five Others on Alleged Violation of Sherman Anti-Trust Law

FINDING AFTER 51 HOURS OF DELIBERATION

Final Vote on the Five Defendants Upon Whom the Jurors Could Not Agree Stood 8 to 4 for Acquittal—William Rockefeller, Charles F. Brooker, Charles M. Pratt, Lewis Cass Ledyard and Edward D. Robbins Are Those Who Were Not Cleared—Chief Counsel for Government Has Announced That He Will Move for a New Trial of the Five.

New York, Jan. 9.—Six of the eleven former directors of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, charged by the government with criminal violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, were found not guilty late today by the jury which for nearly three months has been trying the case. The jury disagreed on the other five.

The Men Acquitted. Those acquitted were D. Newton Barney, Farmington, Conn.; Robert W. Taft, Providence, R. I.; James S. Hanning, New York; Frederick F. Brewster of New Haven, and Henry K. McHarg, Stamford, Conn.

Those on Whom Jury Disagreed. Those on whom the jury disagreed were William Rockefeller, New York; Charles F. Brooker, Ansonia; Charles M. Pratt, Brooklyn; Lewis Cass Ledyard, New York, and Edward D. Robbins, New Haven.

The verdict was returned at 4.30 o'clock this afternoon, after 51 hours of deliberation, and the jury was discharged. The final vote on the five defendants was 8 to 4 for acquittal. R. L. Batts, chief counsel for the government, announced that he would move for a new trial of these five. This will be done, he said, before any effort will be made to try the six other former directors of the road who were indicted but who obtained the right to be tried separately.

Instructed by Court. The jurors did not reach their verdict until after they had reported to Judge Hunt earlier in the day that they could not agree. Up to that time noon—they had been deliberating with a jury of twenty-five men, who were instructed to return a verdict on the five defendants collectively. The court then instructed them to make further effort to reach a verdict on each of the five defendants individually. The jury did not agree on any, to try and reach a decision on some. The vote on the five defendants was 8 to 4 for acquittal, it was learned.

Two Jurors Held Out. On returning to the jury room, the jurors renewed their discussion with the government attorneys, and they unanimously eliminated the six defendants who were acquitted. Two of the jurors, Charles M. Pratt and Edward D. Robbins, held out for a verdict of 8 to 4 for acquittal, it was learned.

Rockefeller Not Present. William Rockefeller, who is ill, and Henry K. McHarg were not present when the jurors haggard and untidy, fled in the court room to render their verdict. The jury was held out for several hours, but they reached the 8 to 4 alignment.

Read Names of Those Acquitted. After the usual questions by the principal phases of the case, the jurors agreed to return a verdict, the foreman of the jury read out the names of those acquitted, then those of the defendants upon whom they had failed to agree. The court thanked the jury, but hardly had he concluded his remarks when defendants' attorneys, who were standing in the room were on their feet and there was a general handshaking. Without regard to their status under the verdict, the defendants shook hands with the jurors and with government counsel.

Discussed Principal Phases. While they had discussed all the principal phases of the case, the jurors said, the chief issues of debate were the matter of the alleged conspiracy of the directors to operate the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad by which the government charged the directors with a monopoly of the transportation traffic of New England. The so-called Billard transactions were virtually ignored, the jurors said, having in the opinion of most of them been ruled out by the charge of Judge Hunt.
