THOMAS LOGIS IS FOUND GUILTY OF ASSAULT WITH INTENT TO KILL WILLIAM GITCHIER AT NORWICH TOWN LAST NOVEMBER—SHOT GITCHIER TWICE IN A FIGHT—WAS CHARGED WITH ASSAULT WITH INTENT TO KILL AND MURDER.

Thomas Logis, alias Thomas O'Farrell and other names, a resident of Norwich town, was found guilty by the jury in the superior court here on Wednesday afternoon of assault with intent to kill.

He had been tried on the charge of assault with intent to kill and murder of William Gitchier, but the verdict of the jury placed only the lesser crime against him, eliminating the "intent to murder" charge.

After receiving the case at 2 o'clock the jury was out until 3.30 before it was ready to report a verdict. When they took their seats and had answered to the roll call, Foreman Edwin M. Gray of Griswold answered Clerk Parsons' inquiry as to why they had agreed upon a verdict, and that it was guilty of assault with intent to kill.

Judge Bennett received the verdict and Attorney Edward T. Burke who had defended the accused stated to the court that he would like to have sentence deferred until the next day. State Attorney Hull did not object and Judge Bennett said he would pronounce sentence Thursday.

The jury in the case was as follows: Albin L. Hale and Philip Spelman, Norwich; John P. Weston, Alfred; Albert H. Potts, Colchester; William R. Palmer and Edwin M. Gray, Griswold; Horace Fote and Elmer Foltz, Lebanon; M. O. Chapman and Alfred M. Clarke, North Stonington; Holcomb.

WHERE DO YOU STAND ON NEW YEAR'S. One of the Questions for the Day, Says Rev. C. H. Ricketts.

The shop talks at the plant of the Richmond Radiator company were continued on Wednesday afternoon after a holiday recess of two weeks.

Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, pastor of the Greenville Congregational church, presided at the meeting on the subject of New Year's Greetings.

Although it is a little late to extend the usual New Year's greetings, said Rev. Mr. Ricketts, as this our first meeting since the year began, I do so now. New Year's day, in its own way, is a day of nothing worthy of special notice. It is not a monument to some great deed in our political past like the Fourth of July Memorial day. It has no place in the religious calendar like Christmas and Good Friday. It is simply an imaginary line that marks a certain division of time and imaginary things are of great value to the world—at least they have been in the past. Poetry is a creation of the mind, so in fiction, but the world would be poorer without them. No one in crossing the highest seas ever saw latitude or longitude because they are imaginary lines, but they serve a very important purpose. Commerce could not be carried on without a knowledge of latitude and longitude, neither would there be any safety at sea.

January 1 is like December 31, and the new year does not bring us up with a jolt.

The morning of the new year has the same weather conditions as the evening of the old year—usually. Both days find us in the grip of winter and many people in other kinds of grip.

However imaginary this distinction is, it is important in business and morals. Poetry may be imaginary but it affects character. New Year's may stand for artificial division in time but it makes much difference to a man who has a note to pay whether his calendar rears 1915 or 1916. How could banks do business without these imaginary lines? What confusion in history without such letters as B. C. and A. D. They stand for imaginary distinctions.

Urging men to discover their whereabouts in the greater practical value of New Year's. At sea it is very important to know the latitude or longitude, or east of Greenwich or west of Washington; whether you are in north or south latitude or longitude, nothing is more important than for a man to know whether the past year has been one of profit or loss. For that matter, the same thing is true in business. It is equally important to find out whether a man is going to enter the new year as a moral bankrupt or not. It is a duty which every man owes to himself to discover at stated times, just what his normal latitude and longitude are. The company he works for, the community in which he lives? The God to whom he belongs?

Sun Eclipse on February 3. J. J. Nassau, a post-graduate student in the department of mathematics and astronomy of Syracuse university, according to an article published in the Syracuse Daily Orange, has computed the exact time at which the sun will be eclipsed on the morning of February 3. According to his calculations for Syracuse, the eclipse will begin at twenty-one minutes after 10 o'clock and will end twenty-four minutes after noon, thus being visible about two hours.

This eclipse will be seen as a part eclipse in the eastern part of the United States on February 3. The line of totality, from the Pacific ocean, passes through the northern part of South America just south of Brazil, then into the Atlantic, finally ending near the southern coast of Ireland.
