the making munitions trade seems had. Foreigners are amazed to see how few newspapers the Viennese read, and they buy still less preferring to read them in the cafes. Papers are not allowed to be sold in the streets, but only by tobacconists and newsagents and it is said that fewer papers are sold in Vienna, proportionately to the population, than in any other capital in Europe.

The Viennese are as friendly as ever to foreigners. The police do not trouble them and it is not even necessary to produce a passport for a short visit. Many French citizens have remained in Vienna and carry on their own language on the streets unharmed. The Viennese show no great hatred for their enemies except the Italians, against whom they are fearfully bitter.

In Budapest the war seems much more in evidence. There are more military trains carrying troops against the Russians and large numbers of German soldiers are going down to the Orient. Then there are great concentrations of grain and petroleum and other products passing through Hungary from Rumania to Germany.

This last is a very significant indication of the new political and economic developments going on between the Central Powers and the Balkans. The war has brought these countries much closer together, having shown absolutely essential it is to maintain communication through the Balkans with Turkey and the Near East. Important conferences have been held lately in Budapest, Vienna, Munich and other German cities with regard to improving and developing the Danube navigation and constructing canal communications between that river and the principal rivers in Germany.

But while participating in these meetings both Austria and Hungary are secretly greatly concerned at Germany's intense interest in the subject, desiring to see her commercial activities in the Balkans strengthened by such improved communications. In business competition the Austrians and Hungarians are no match for the Germans, who have in recent years greatly extended their trade with the Balkan countries which was formerly largely in the hands of the merchants of Vienna and Budapest.

EXAMPLES OF HEROISM
BY FRENCH SOLDIERS.
Displayed on Battlefields Every Day and Every Hour.

Before Verdun, Aug. 1.—Examples of the heroism displayed by French soldiers of all ranks in the tremendous attack upon this fortress occur in every corner of the battlefield, not as anything exceptional, but every day and every hour.

During ten days that a certain battalion held the ground between Douaumont and Fleury, talking and looting, and retaking foot by foot, almost inch by inch, plots of land torn up by shell-fire and mines, it fought twelve German attacks and counter-attacks the same number of times. On one of these occasions the battalion had before it ten companies of German infantry with a machine gun company and two squads sending out liquid fire. "It was satanic," said a French officer, "a horrible dream, a hell." Yet the battalions held out notwithstanding its many losses.

Lieut. G. all but a few of these Verdun heroes are nameless—though badly wounded in the thigh remained at the head of his company for three whole days and was carried into the thick of the fighting on a stretcher, directing his men, keeping tab on the ammunition supply, and even writing a letter to his colonel telling how he and his men had resisted five attacks in four days without giving way a single inch.

Another Lieutenant, inspector of an insurance company, seeing a hostile machine-gun taking position in a trench trench asked his colonel's permission to attack though it meant certain death. With a pipe in his mouth and swinging a little cane he led the onset, calling out: "Come on, boys, let's charge like musketeers!" Six bullets found lodgment in his body before the trench was reached, but then he had his reward for the trench was taken and the machine-gun destroyed.

Still a third Lieutenant, Lieutenant T., joined in a counter-attack which succeeded in driving the enemy out of a trench he had captured. The retiring Germans took with them eight men of Lieutenant T.'s company as prisoners. That would not do for Lieutenant T., who, with a single sergeant, jumped out of the regimental trench, peeped the Germans with his revolver, and brought back his eight men. For this act of bravery he was promoted captain.

FRENCH SOCIETY WOMEN
CARRY BRITISH STICKS
Carried Only in the Bois de Boulogne Go With Short Skirts.

Paris, August 1.—The British officers "swagger stick" is seen again in the delicate bejewelled hands of French society women in the Bois de Boulogne. It is the third time in recent years that the fashion of "capes for women" has been tried. They appeared at Trouville in 1898 in the hands of a well known Parisian authoress. A spasmodic attempt to introduce it was made soon after the British troops began disembarking in French ports but it got no further than the boulevards. The boulevards finally tired of it, then the fashionable "faubourg" took it up. It is carried only in the Bois de Boulogne and it goes with the inevitable short skirt, with gaiters preferably to high boots and with a jacket having four pockets and resembling, even to the brass buttons, the regulation khaki vareuse of the British officer. A jaunty velvet toque resembling the army fatigue cap, completes the martial air of the costume. The fashion has not been so general since the Directory, about the same time that London tried "muffs for men" and while Vienna was experimenting "with monocles for women."

The Call To Breakfast

Has a new appeal for those who awake to a breakfast of These new corn flakes bear a unique deliciousness because of their self-developed flavor and improved form. The flavor is the true essence of choice, ripe Indian corn. Unlike ordinary "corn flakes," the New Post Toasties do not depend upon cream and sugar for their palatability.

Try some dry—they're good that way and the test will demonstrate their flavor. Then try some with cream or rich milk. Note that New Post Toasties are not "chaffy" in the package; and that they don't mush down when cream is added.

New Post Toasties are known by the tiny "bubbles" on each flake, produced by the quick, intense heat of the new process of making. They come in a wax-sealed package that preserves their oven crispness and delightful flavor—the most perfect corn flakes ever produced.
