Human Interest in Westerly Court

Judge Williams Listened to the Tale of One Philip Sheridan - William Boyd Fined and David Roberts Placed on Probation - Protest Against Frank B. Tillinghast's Application to Place Wife in Retreat.

"Half a pint of rum will set me to climbing a tree," quote Philip Sheridan of Phenixville, Pa., in telling his story before Judge Williams, in the Third District court, Friday, when called upon to answer to the charge of intoxication. The court simply allowed Philip to go on untried. He had been at work in Westerly for a construction company for two weeks and had been arrested twice for drunkenness during that time. He told the court of the methods of the construction company and of the unfair treatment to employees, of the charge for two weeks. Judge Williams assumed the lodging that was unfit for human beings and all that sort of guff. Philip explained that he had no money when he came to Westerly two weeks ago and that was the reason why he had bought a serviceable pair of shoes since his arrival and he had an order for 22 worth of clothes in his possession. This he said was in excess of what he had before commencing work here, that there was still money due him from the construction company. It had been settled with the construction company. In addition he had been arrested for drunkenness within the two weeks. Judge Williams decided that Philip evidently was more interested in the construction company's methods than with his own. Philip pleaded guilty to the charge of intoxication and a fine of $2 and costs of $2.50 were imposed.

William Boyd, who was the complainant in an assault case in New London, recently wherein a colored man threw dishes at a colored woman, in the presence of Boyd, was charged with intoxication and pleaded guilty. He said he had resided in Westerly for forty years and had been arrested twice for intoxication, the first time being about fifteen years ago. Chief Brown stated that it was at Boyd's house where the white woman, McDonald, resided, and that up to ten days ago he had received complaint of goings-on at the Boyd house, and warned Boyd that conditions must improve. Since then there have been no complaints. Thursday night Boyd was down and out upon a lawn in Main street and he was arrested. The court imposed a fine of $2 and costs of $2.50.

David Roberts when called to the bar of justice to answer to the charge of being a common drunkard pleaded guilty, and said he could not tell the number of times he had been arrested, and all for intoxication. He was present and pleaded for leniency. Chief Brown informed the court that Roberts could return to his work at noon, if released by the court, and advocated giving him one more chance to make good. He advocated placing him on probation, but to hold the charge of common drunkard against him. Roberts knew well what that meant. This chief said if Roberts violated the probation he deserved the severest sentence. Judge Williams appreciated the appeal and the chief of police, as it was unusual and away from the ordinary. He strongly reminded Roberts of what he was and what he could be, and advised him to do his best. Roberts was placed on probation and warned that if brought into court again for intoxication, that the present charge of being a common drunkard would be meted out to him to the limit.
