Monday morning the question arose as to which was the better runner. Mr. Donovan challenged Mr. Walker, the event to take place at 8:30 Wednesday morning, and the same was agreed upon, Walker was in the best of condition and would be far wiser to cancel the picnic.

Teacher Signs Contract. The signed contract of Emma G. Suydam, Ridgefield, N. J., who was elected teacher of history and biology in the high school, was signed by Charles L. Torrey, secretary of the school board, at the meeting of the board held Wednesday evening at 7:30. Miss Suydam will fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mildred P. May Not Be Paralyzed. The condition of Fred Wilcox, of Woodstock reported Tuesday as probably ill with infantile paralysis, is reported to improve, and there was some doubt in the minds of the authorities Wednesday afternoon as to whether the case is really paralytic.

Whether the case is really paralytic, Wilcox is able to get about the house for a short period each day, and Dr. Joseph Spaulding, who is caring for him, said Wednesday that he has seen absolutely no trace of paralysis. The case will be kept under close observation for a while. Notices are posted about the town of Woodstock and a quarantine is being maintained.

Owing to the quarantins in Woodstock, many who go to Roseland lake with children will be obliged to stay away until the quarantine is lifted. School openings may be deferred. A suggestion was made Wednesday to Charles L. Torrey, secretary of the Putnam school board, to the effect that the opening of the Putnam schools will be postponed until later in September.

The matter is being taken up with various members of the school board and it seems not at all unlikely that the suggestion will be carried out.

Plainfield. The Militiaman's Story. College men who are members of the militia tell some phony stories and still get by with them as truth. One of these stories was told in Plainfield a short time ago when a college man who is a member of the Yale battalion was home on furlough.

While standing in the railroad station the baggage master walked in and inquired of him the condition of his wound. The militiaman responded that it was improving wonderfully. The baggage master asked if he would not like to have a shot at the grocer who nipped him. The answer was: "You just bet!"

At this moment a bystander walked up and tapped the college youth on the shoulder, inquiring if he was with the 8th Troops at Mexico. Then the college youth left George Washington's class by saying "Yes." The bystander eagerly asked him to explain how he was shot. Without the slightest hesitation, the following story was told: "A number of us boys were anxious to go in swimming and fearing the treacherous Mexicans there were stationed on shore to guard. I was one of the three. I was on guard only a few minutes when a pistol cracked and I felt a sharp pain on my left arm. He pulled up his sleeve and showed a carefully bandaged arm. I was shot, but the bullet did not lodge in my arm, although it tore the flesh badly. We were unable to get a shot at the Mexican or Mexicans, who must have dispersed at once. After telling some stories of life on the border, the interested person brought the speaker (?) to the station and treated him to some of the best and when leaving wished him good luck.

If the interested listener only knew, the speaker was a college boy who was camped at Tobyhanna, Pa., and whose arm was bandaged up as a result of vaccination. Did the baggage master get a cigar? Gratt! or robbery!
