MANY A MERRY MOHEGAN FESTIVAL

Gathering in Wigwam at the Old Church Wednesday Brought Back Indian Days--Mrs. Lydia Fielding Only One Left of Women Who Started Custom 56 Years Ago.

Yesterday and today are the days the Wigwam reigns in Mohegan, when in a bower built of birches at the little old church on top of the hill, the descendants of the famous Uncas and his equally noted heirs are holding festival, symbol of harvest time and autumn cheer. Fifty-six years ago a little group of women of the Mohegan began these festivals and now of their number only one is left, Mrs. Lydia Fielding, who at 84, alert and active and keen spirited, was one of the brightest figures in all the wigwam on Wednesday. The others have passed on, not so happy hunting grounds, but to an even happier home, for the same little old church on top of the hill, has been the scene of the most friendly Indian folk and made them deserving of the best rewards that kindly and helpful lives merit.

And the legends that time has made of those best of the Mohegans has for the past half dozen years caused the abandonment of the far famed Mohegan festival for workers are held and the feast is made of the best. But this year the demands for the renewal of the festival celebration grew insistent and yesterday afternoon a week of planning and days and nights of preparatory activities, the Mohegan festival was held. All its old-time charms seemed to be just one big social family party and all the visitors from this city and New London and the country revelled in Indian anecdote and yodeling, and admired Indian basketry work and the Indian fortune teller. One of the old attendants said he thought it was the biggest first day of the Mohegan festival ever held. The people began to come during the morning hours and more arrived after the glow of the lanterns lit up festively the leafy birch boughs, black and white, that made the roof and walls of the wigwam. A stream, wherever there was a constant stream, by trolley, automobile and on foot. It was a beautiful day for the festival.

KILLED A NINE POUND RATTLESNAKE. Octave J. Nesbit, Formerly of This City, But Now in Service on Border, Finds Them as Thick as Hair on His Head.
Nelson Thorson of this city has received a letter from Octave J. Nesbit, who was formerly employed by Swift & Co. in this city, but who is now with Company L, Fourth U. S. Infantry, at Brownsville, Tex. In which he says among other things:

"I am getting along well, but everything here is slow. Two days after we got here we had a little fight. It did not last long. That was a good start. We had one fellow killed last night, and I started things going. Everyone in the camp is in the mood to fight. On my fourth day I killed a rattlesnake that weighed nine pounds and was eleven feet long. How would you like to see that? There are more rattlesnakes here than there are hair on my head. I am going to get a few more. I have a good gun. I would like to see you. Give the boys my best regards."

WEEK'S SUPPLY OF BEEF IN NORWICH

After That Local People Will Suffer if Railroad Men Strike.
We have at least a week's supply of beef on hand, said John L. Donovan, local manager for Armour and Company, when asked Wednesday night what the local situation would be if the railroad men walk out next Monday morning and the strikers do not do unless their demands are granted. In case of a walkout on the part of the railroad men, assuming that other local beef wholesalers are as well fixed as Armour and Company, there will be enough beef in Norwich to last until the following Monday, what will happen after that is a mere conjecture. There are three ways in which beef and other necessities of life might be brought to Norwich. The auto truck would be one solution, the trolley expresses another, and last lines direct from New York and from beef centers themselves the third. What ever way the shippers choose, local people are bound to be inconvenienced to some extent if the walkout lasts.

The matter of a walkout is looking serious to the railroad heads that embargoes are being rapidly put into effect. The local freight agent, C. J. Isabister, has received notice not to accept any more freight for roads other than the New Haven. This order went into effect Wednesday night. It has also been ordered not to accept freight for other than local points after 5 o'clock Thursday night and not to accept any freight at all after 5 o'clock Friday night.
That the situation would indeed be of the most serious character is the unanimous opinion of wholesale and retail dealers here.
Railroads are the real arteries of transportation running from the food-producing centers of the nation, and should these main courses be suddenly cut off, such marine communication as there might be with commercial centers would be practically impossible.
How long will you be able to continue in business if the railroad strike occurs? was asked the proprietor of one of the biggest creameries in this section.
"Not 24 hours," was the immediate and energetic reply, followed by a volley of questions of character which the postal laws prohibit using in the public press.

Development Committee Will Meet Friday. Norwich Members Will Extend Invitation to Hold Midwinter Banquet Here.
The August meeting of the Eastern Connecticut Development committee will be held at Crescent Beach Friday, Sept. 1, at 7 o'clock. The committee will meet at this meeting, when proposed matters for discussion and action will be presented.
The banquet will be held at the White Beach hotel, where a shore dinner will be served at noon, followed by the banquet at 7 o'clock. The principal matter under consideration now is that of changing the name of the Eastern Connecticut Development committee to the Eastern Connecticut Development Association. The name is satisfactory and will be continued.
The subject of a midwinter banquet will be discussed and Norwich members of the committee will extend the invitation to the committee to meet here and the Norwich Chamber of Commerce will make every effort to bring up to the high standard of past years. The banquet will probably be set on Friday and this will give ample time to secure the necessary arrangements. The date for the occasion has been determined.
(1) Receipt will be received at the meeting of the president of the committee has asked that new topic be brought in for consideration. Those who attend the meeting will have the grand opportunity to meet the Grand Chief on his own hunting ground, the main street in Danbury, where interest along the shore of New London county.

AUTO BACKED INTO IRON BRIDGE RAILING. Car Left Standing Suddenly Stopped Down Washington Square Grade.
An excellent proof of the substantial manner in which the falling over the sea boat club Wednesday evening when a Hartford automobile salesman was driving up the hill, was anchored up in Washington square. The car was in a store for half a minute. Just as he got inside, however, the brakes on the car let go and the machine proceeded to back down the grade, gaining momentum in accordance with the laws of physics and moving bodies. On the bridge the car swerved and backed precipitately into the railing of the bridge. Strange to say the railing was not broken and the car was not deposited in the bottom of the river, but the iron was only bent and the car was not damaged.
It is estimated that approximately 600 railroad men, members of the four brotherhoods, will be affected by the strike, will be affected in Norwich and New London and vicinity, including the strand at Waterbury.
There are between 400 and 500 men on the road, consisting of engineers, firemen, conductors and trainmen, who would be affected in about 100 yards, including yard conductors, brakemen, and switchmen. Of the men on the road, about the same number are engineers, firemen and conductors, and the other two-fifths are trainmen.

ORDERED FARMER TO REMAIN AT HOME. Owner of Wauwucous Hill Farm Must Stay in Quarantine for Three Weeks.
City Health Officer Edward J. Brophy was informed on Wednesday that Philip Rosenberg, proprietor of the farm at Wauwucous Hill, had taken a 3 year old Dorothy Zuckerman was taken to the Backus hospital with infantile paralysis on August 25. The city health officer just now in investigating this report, and when he encountered the case, he was ordered to keep out of Norwich for the next three weeks without fail. The farmer was ordered to remain in quarantine at the health officer's request, but when the situation had been explained to the farmer, he was permitted to return home. The Zuckerman child remained pretty sick at the hospital Wednesday with one arm paralyzed and one leg swollen. Dr. Brewer, the attending physician at the hospital, thinks there is not much danger.

Dr. Thompson said Wednesday night that this new case at East Great Plain would not influence in any way the attendance of children at the county fair next week. The woman's home is north from Backus corner and in a position remote from travel and in perfect isolation. The health officer finally on the question of letting children go to the fair in view of the general situation in the town and city health officers will confer.

The Sunday schools of the city following the example set by other cities and following the announcement of the first case of paralysis in Norwich a number have announced the decision to suspend their classes on Wednesday day before the public schools open. City Health Officer Brophy endorses the decision. It is his duty to keep children from congregating at this time, particularly where they will be in contact with other children. The Greenville congregation, at St. Patrick's and St. Mary's Sunday schools are those who have arranged to delay their classes. The other schools expected to follow in their wake. Trinity M. E. Sunday school has decided that no child under 10 years of age should be allowed to come into the paralysis situation has cleared up more than at present. The health department officials stated on Wednesday that the infantile paralysis situation in New London is about the same as in the other parts of the state or any startling developments since Tuesday.

The health department is taking steps for the return to New York of a New York boy, claimed to be under 16 years of age, who evaded the health officer's attention on Wednesday. The boy's mother is in New York and she has furnished proof that he is over 16. The boy came up on the New London line Sunday morning, was arrested by the mother in Salem and he was held up by a health inspector who suspected that the boy was not 16 as he claimed. He was to have returned to New York on the 11.33 express Tuesday morning, but he succeeded in escaping the vigilance of the authorities and went to Salem.

Tuesday night Samuel Elenden of Salem went to New London to get the boy's baggage, which had been quarantined at the union station. It was returned and he was compelled under the penalty of spending the night in jail to tell where the boy was. The boy's mother telephoned to the health department Wednesday morning for his baggage and she was informed by Dr. Chipman that she could not have it, and furthermore, she would have to pay the cost of the baggage if she were to have it. The boy is now in the hands of the authorities and will be returned to New York.

Arrested for Theft at Fort Neck. James Walsh, of Mystic, until recently an employe of the New Haven railroad, discharged a few weeks ago, was arrested Wednesday afternoon by Martin Kane, one of the road's special agents, charged with stealing a hard wearing coat and a necktie from a freight car in the Fort Neck yard.

It is alleged that Walsh went to the railroad yard Tuesday afternoon and forced an entrance to one of the cars.
