Westerly Lighting Rates Unchanged

Matter Discussed Tuesday at Town Council Meeting, But No Action Taken—Protest Against Use of Spruce Street for Roller Skating—Seventeen Arrests During August—Rod and Gun Club's Tourney Results.

At a meeting of the Westerly town council, several weeks ago, the proposition of the Narragansett Lighting company for a reduction of rates for electric lights was adopted, but the section regarding the minimum charge of $1 a month was left open; or rather to be effective in connection with the new rates unless changed by the public utilities commission.

Councilman Thorp, of the council committee had been in conference with representatives of the electric light company, and that the committee favored the proposition to reduce the rate to 12 cents per kilowatt hour as against 14 cents, and that the committee were told plainly that the company could not do this without charging a minimum monthly rate of $1, or make the charge on a yearly instead of a monthly adjustment.

Jesse Gray, rate expert for the Narragansett Lighting company, and its subsidiaries, said there was no objection to the minimum rate, but the only objection is the method, and the rates are designed to prevent loss on any particular class of consumers, but in order to do this there must be a minimum charge, to save one class from paying the lighting bill of another. The contention of some people in Westerly is that the minimum charge, be on a yearly basis, while the monthly basis plan has been upheld by courts and all public utilities commissions in Massachusetts, where there is a yearly minimum. Mr. Gray said the monthly minimum was more equitable. It was necessary to install a meter service, and every meter consumes electricity whether used or not. These losses are to the company. It is necessary to have these meters read and inspected and there must be a fixed charge for all service. If all customers used the service, the result would be more profitable to the company, as there would be steady load. If the service is installed, it is an added investment of the company, and those who use only a part of the service are not as profitable in proportion as the consumer who uses it all. Why the minimum rate is monthly and not yearly. If the minimum rate was yearly the regular rate would have to be increased to the minimum, the rate would be still higher.

Frank W. Coy, representing the committee of the Westerly Board of Trade, stated that although the Narragansett company recently acquired the local plant it was with full knowledge of the local conditions, and he knew the present company could grant the yearly minimum rate and make money. The offer of the company to reduce the rate to 12 cents per kilowatt, and the reduction is mighty small at that, even if the difference between 14 and 12 cents does look big. Mr. Coy said that if it was necessary to have a minimum charge, there was no objection to a yearly charge.

as a rink for roller skating, and were a menace to public safety, as pedestrians must get in the street or take the chance of being knocked down and injured. Mr. O'Brien said these young fellows had also damaged young trees. He stated these conditions created a nuisance that ought to be abated. President Flynn informed Mr. O'Brien that the matter would be taken up with the police department.

The report of Thomas E. Brown, chief of police, showed 17 arrests during August for these causes: Intoxication 11, loud and wanton persons 2, and one each for violent assault, revelling, defacing a building and theft. Joseph Wilcox and Stephen H. Manchester, were appointed constables without pay and without authority to serve process. Lewis Stanton, superintendent of health, reported five cases of infantile paralysis during the month of August. The case of Louis Desario Janaro, 177, for loss of melons and bananas in connection with the case of August 25, was considered at the meeting. The liquor license of Pickering and Sullivan was transferred to Joseph Pickering. Three milk licenses were granted. The annual approval of the voting list to be used in the next election, seven names being removed on account of death.
