It Has Developed That Such Rumors Are Based on Misinformation. Berlin, Nov. 17.—The American Association of Commerce and Trade of Berlin has been investigating the rumors circulated abroad to the effect that Germany is preparing for dumping enormous quantities of cheap goods there after the close of the war. According to these rumors, Germany has mobilized a vast army of ill-paid old men, women and children to work on cheap staple goods for export, consisting chiefly of steel and iron goods, dyes and others. It is further represented that vast quantities of these goods are being stored for shipment when the war ends. According to the association's weekly reports, all such rumors are based upon misinformation. It finds that there is no surplus labor in Germany that could be diverted to the production of the goods in question. Moreover, the supply of labor is not even sufficient for producing the demands of home consumers, besides the vast quantities of war materials needed; and instead of wages being so low now that manufacturers would find this a favorable time for producing cheap goods, the report points out that the wages of all workers have abnormally increased, in proportion to the increased cost of living. The iron and steel now produced in Germany is consumed for the greater part in making arms and ammunition, while the remainder barely suffices for the legitimate requirements of civilians. It being obvious therefore that no output is left over for delivery after the war. Hence also hardware, household goods and many export articles of iron and steel are now produced to a very limited extent, just covering the domestic demand, and practically all orders from neutral countries have had to be cancelled. Similar statements are made regarding the dyestuffs industry. Their prices have risen considerably during the war. Makers do not limit themselves to making dyes; they also make, and now more than ever, chemicals, drugs and explosives, so that dyestuffs are now playing an insignificant role in production. In respect to toys, it is noted that production is rendered very difficult by reason of the lack of raw materials, so that the output is limited to the domestic demand. The entire range of textile industries, which constitute a very large segment of Germany's economic activity, are now wholly eliminated from manufacture for export owing to lack of the raw materials; supplies of these are so short that they were long ago confiscated by the government in order to conserve them for military requirements, and only such small quantities are liberated for the requirements of the civilian population as are absolutely necessary. This is also true of the rubber and leather trades. In fact, there is not one single industry that could be named in which conditions as to raw materials, supplies, labor and wages are such as would render it possible for manufacturers to turn out goods with a view to storing them for sale abroad after the war. TRAINMEN'S BROTHERHOOD MUST SHOW CAUSE. Why an Injunction Should Not be Issued on Admon Law. Auburn, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Judge George W.
