77,000 Will See Harvard-Yale Game

Largest Crowd in History of the Great Gridiron Classic Will Witness the Contest Today—Harvard a Slight Favorite

Yale Ready for the Struggle

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 24.—Football, properly and the high cost of living are completely assembled here tonight on the eve of the Harvard-Yale annual gridiron contest. The one topic of conversation among both town and gown is the game of the morrow. While the undergraduates discuss the respective merits and wagers upon the strength of the two elevenes, the uninitiated tradesman is raking in the shillings and the visitors groaning under the load of trebled and quadrupled prices for everything necessary for man and machine.

This city has been the scene of many previous big football struggles and big gatherings of gridiron fans, but all former records fall before the rush of enthusiasts, the bare footed runners, entirely out of the question and even those who had the forethought to engage their quarters in September or October are paying from fifteen to twenty dollars per person for the privilege of being the guest at the leading hostilities of the City of Elms.

Every surrounding town has fallen here to the overflow and Bridgeport, New London and Waterbury and Hartford have called for the last reserve of cots in order to satisfy the demand of the Yale and Harvard legions arriving in the city in the morning.

All parts of the country. The automobile traffic is far greater than ever. Hundreds of cars are being parked upon private property and their owners and friends being made as comfortable as possible in boarding houses and the homes of local residents.

Large as the night-before through is, the real rush will begin in the morning, when the long special trains from New York, Boston and many intermediate points deposit the additional thousands which, with the motor car crowd will go to make up the 77,000 spectators at the game and the nearby towns and villages send half as many again who spend the day in viewing the visitors and the scenes incidental to the game. More than 300 extra police have been engaged to handle the invading hosts and elaborate traffic rules evolved for the occasion.

Although the wagering odds have fluctuated considerably during the past 24 hours, Harvard continues to be a slight favorite and a majority of the bets have been laid at 10 to 9, with the Crimson cohorts giving the extra point in order to bring out the Yale money. With the arrival of the Harvard train at 10:30 in the morning it is expected that the betting will drop to even money, however, for the Harvard crowd and elaborate traffic rules evolved for the occasion.

For the twenty-first time since 1890, the Army and Navy football teams will meet in a battle upon the gridiron in New York today, when the two Second Army regiments, the Polo Grounds greensward, notwithstanding the counter attraction of the Harvard and Yale teams, will come forward every ticket for the vast baseball stadium has been sold for spectators for the game this afternoon, with a signal drill in the Bowl and it was found that despite the excellent drainage system, the field was waterlogged.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET FLUCTUATED.

A Cautious Attitude Was Assumed by the Professional Element.

New York, Nov. 24.—Recessions caused by the pessimism of the preceding session were largely overcome today, traders taking renewed courage and rumors to materialize. Dealings proceeded in a tentative manner, however, with the cautious attitude of the professional element.

The market was again traceable to admissions from banking interests and the increasing discrimination extended against loans for speculative purposes. This was justified by the maintenance of stiff rates for all money, based on forecasts indicating a further loss of reserves by local institutions.

Constructive developments included the declaration of an initial dividend of 5 per cent. on Atlantic, Gulf and West India, resumption of dividends on Railway Steel and other increased disbursements by other industrial companies.

Coppers as a group led the recovery on reports of a further advance of the metal extending into the middle of next year. American Smelting recovered its market value, but more than twice over at an extreme rise of 3 1/2 to 5 points, with 2 to 3 1/2 for Chile and Grano, gains of 1 to 1 1/2 for Mexico, 1 to 1 1/2 for Cuba, 1 to 1 1/2 for Canada, 1 to 1 1/2 for Nevada, Greene Caravan and Inspiration.

Stocks advanced at the forenoon throughout, advancing almost 3 points to 126 7/8, with 1 to 1 1/2 for Crucible, Lockwood, Sloss-Sheridan, Colorado Fuel, Republic Iron and Great Northern Ore. More striking gains included 25 points for Gulf States Steel, 5 to 2 1/2 for Pittsburgh Coal, 1 to 1 1/2 for Montana Power, 1 for Ohio Gas, 1 to 1 1/2 for Pressed Steel Car and 5 for Air Brake.

Rising, Union Pacific and Norfolk and Western represented the high grade rails at 1 to almost 2 point advances. The market showed perceptible improvement together with many miscellaneous stocks. Total sales amounted to 1,275,459 shares.

Rock Island debenture fives and copper convertible issues were the most featured of the bond market. International manufacturing further regularity. Total sales, par value, aggregated $5,325,000.

United States bonds were unchanged on call.

Yale Eleven is Not Versatile Enough to Pound Its Way for Consistent Gains Says Sol Metzger—Crimson Will Check the Blue Attack

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Coach Washington and Jefferson Football Team.

Although Yale is a slight favorite in today's game with Harvard because of the comparative showing of these two teams against Brown and Princeton I am inclined to think the Crimson will win on 1 base this prediction entirely on what I know of this year's Yale eleven and not on any first hand information about the Harvard team, for I have not seen the Crimson in action.

The situation sizes itself up in this shape to my way of thinking. Yale's powerful team is not versatile enough to pound its way for consistent gains against the Crimson, whereas Harvard, with a more varied attack, should have a slight advantage on offense. Yale has not proven itself capable of stopping a versatile attack, although its defense against straight rushing is splendid. This defense was the Tigers' lack of offense. It was tested by Washington and Jefferson, Colgate and Princeton, and in each case it failed somewhat.

Harvard Ought to Check Yale.

Harvard, if it runs true to form in attack, even lacking men like Mahan and King, should worry Yale's defense considerably and Harvard, for similar reasons, should be able to check Yale's plan of offense, an offense that is well known to the Crimson because it has two systems in a dozen years.

And the Crimson coaches have used this season in nothing of the kind. They have not shown individual strength of the past half dozen years and looking its drubbing in that light, it is not surprising that they have thereby saving its regulars for the big event of the year today.

CASEY VS. LEGORE.

Yale and Crimson Star Backfitters Ought to Furnish Thrills Saturday.

Pollard vs. Hastings should Brown and Pitt meet in an after-the-regular schedule game; Vidal or Oliphant vs. Berry, could a Penn vs. Army game be arranged, and of course we've had the Maubetsch vs. Shiverick when Cornell and Michigan played, but the prospects of Eddie Casey vs. Harry Legore next Saturday hold alluring prospects as anything we could pick out on the football bill of fare this year.

Casey isn't as frequent a late hit as he used to be, but the recent showing of Casey vs. Legore is hardly fair, for it doesn't give a fitting idea of the wonderful punning, dodging, and passing ability that Casey possesses. With an even break in luck Casey should have more than a smattering of thrills Saturday.

Legore, on the other hand, has given evidence that he is ready to establish himself as a real Yale hero. Two years ago his brilliant work was smothered by the poorness of his team. Early this year he wasn't displaying the form expected of him, but he has threatened genuine sensationalism.

Had his work at carrying the ball been up to his defensive showing, it wouldn't have been a case of threatening, but he was stopped many times on the offense.

In defense, however, he was everywhere, in fact so good at one stage today for a ten round heavyweight bout at St. Paul, Minn., on Dec. 22. Moran was so good that Legore secured the finest defensive play he ever witnessed.

High praise, indeed. Another instance showing his speed and ability to size up a play, was when he appeared like a shot and smothered a forward pass that Ames was about to receive with an open field for a touchdown. There is every reason to believe that he will turn himself loose for Yale's last game for the Blue, which, as we said above, will make the Governor Copper, of Kansas, says women excel men in their interest in politics.

Hunter Meets Brown in Finals.

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 24.—Robert Hunter of Noroton, Conn., and Donald Pearson of Youngstown, Ohio, will meet here tomorrow for the finals of the annual autumn golf tournament. Hunter had little difficulty in disposing of Fred Fulton, 1 and 2.
