The Bible class for men held an interesting session on Tuesday evening and discussed as a topic, The Fame of Jesus. It was brought out in the discussion that although Jesus became famous for the great works He did, He ignores the desire of the people when on one occasion they would have made Him king. He strived not to be popular but simply to be of service.

There is a great danger in seeking popularity. The desire for fame should not influence our motives. Our motives should be to be of service to our fellows.
