Made-In-Connecticut War Interviews

An Interview With Dr. Valeria H. Parker of Hartford.

"To protect soldiers and sailors as well as civilians against the dangers of immorality is one of the most important tasks confronting the women of this country," said Dr. Valeria H. Parker when asked about measures being taken to prevent diseases due to immorality in the Army and Navy. Dr. Parker is chairman of the health and recreation committee, Connecticut State Council of Defense. She said in an interview made public today by the state defense council:

"To stamp out from the Army and Navy those terrible contagious diseases which have their rise in immorality but find many victims among the innocent is a problem which, for the first time in the history of the world, our nation is facing fairly and squarely. Success in dealing with the problem depends mainly upon two things—first, recognition of the importance of the moral issue; second, a weakening of the responsibility of the community at large. Medical prophylaxis must be continued as military routine until moral prophylaxis—the single standard of morality—has gained a stronger foothold among officers and men alike. We cannot succeed in a solution of the problem if rigid zones are established about military cantonments while communities outside of the military zones continue to flourish. Every man in the Army and Navy should receive through carefully selected literature and lectures the facts of life in a clean, straightforward way. That many of our young men have passed from home, school and church without having had proper ideals of the relationships of life given them has made it possible for improper acts to ruin body and soul.

"Much encouragement is to be found in the public stand taken by Secretary of War Baker in their determination to protect the men who are to fight for us in establishing a world democracy. Those citizens who remain in our communities will fall in patriotic duty unless they bend every effort toward cooperating in the elimination of those evils which are more to be feared than mutilation or death upon the field of battle. We must support liberally the Y. M. C. A. and the Knights of Columbus—those agencies which are to follow our men to the encampments and even to the battlefields, providing them with wholesome interest and activities. We must also strengthen our preparation of the boys and girls in our midst by providing increased recreational centers, under proper supervision and the elimination of unwholesome temptations. The matter of sex education must be our serious concern. In order to combat those diseases which are as dangerous to civil as to military life, we should insist on the enforcement of the law which requires physicians to report anonymously all patients found to be suffering from venereal disease and should provide free day and evening clinics and hospital facilities for treatment. Only by the complete cooperation of educational, medical and spiritual agencies shall we eliminate the double standard of morals which endangers the nation through destruction of the physical and moral foundations of family life."

Trade of the United States With the Dutch East Indies.

The suggestion that a number of the Dutch ships now lying idle in the harbor of New York may be assigned to the carrying of supplies to the Dutch East Indies and the United States, is of special interest at this time when the trade of this country with those islands is by far the largest in the history of our commerce. A compilation by The National City Bank of New York shows that the trade of the United States with the Dutch East Indies in the fiscal year 1917 was more than that of the five years preceding the war. Imports from the islands in the fiscal year 1914, all of which preceded the war, were but $5,254,000 but jumped to $9,246,000 in 1915; $27,717,000 in 1916, and $62,011,000 in 1917. Exports from the United States to the Dutch East Indies which were in 1914, $2,780,000 advanced to $7,401,000 in 1915 and $21,191,000 in 1917. Thus our trade with the islands in 1917 was nine times as great as that of 1914, the fiscal year immediately preceding the war.

This large increase, while due in some degree to the disarrangement of transportation facilities between those islands and the mother country, Netherlands, to which most of their exports were usually sent for distribution to other parts of the world, and from which their imports were chiefly drawn, is also due in part to increased demands by the United States for their principal products.

Of India rubber, of which our total imports last year were nearly three times as great as in the year before the war, we took from the Dutch East Indies in 1917, 45,000,000 pounds against 453,000 pounds in 1914, or nearly ten times as much in 1917 as in 1914. Of hides and skins, for which we are ransacking the world, the imports from the Netherlands Indies were $9,000,000 pounds in 1917 against less than $50,000 pounds in 1914. Of tin of which our 1916 imports were the largest in the history of the trade, the total coming direct from the Dutch East Indies was 14,000,000 pounds against but 55,000 pounds from those islands in 1914 and $26,000 pounds from Netherlands. Of cacao, we took from the islands in 1917, $2,000,000 pounds against 154,000 pounds in 1914; of cocoon oil in 1916, 5,519,000 pounds against 407,000 pounds in 1915, and none in 1914; of pepper in 1916, 15,778,000 pounds and in 1914 but 1,295,000; of kapoc, the new vegetable fiber, about one million dollars worth in 1916 against about one-third of that sum in 1914. The largest item in the 1917 imports from the islands was rubber, of which the value in 1917 was $27,240,000 against $238,000 in 1914, or practically ten times as much in both quantity and value in 1917 as in 1914. In a few articles, notably coffee and leaf tobacco, the quantity from the islands in 1917 was slightly less than in 1914.

This increase in imports from the islands was accompanied by a large increase in our exports to them. The value of merchandise exported to the Dutch East Indies in 1917, $21,000,000 against $7,401,000 in 1916 and $2,772,000 in 1915. This increase in exports to the islands occurred in a large number of articles, automobiles of which the exports to the islands in 1916, the latest year for which details are available, numbered 1,064 against but 105 in 1915, and the value in 1916, $390,000 against but $117,000 in 1915. In a very large number of manufactures of iron and steel there is a marked increase, the total value in iron and steel manufactures to the islands having been in 1916, $2,221,000 against $850,000 in 1914, and a much larger total in 1917, though the details for that year are not yet available. Machinery, preserved iron, nails, wire, and iron pipes show marked increases in both 1916 and 1917.

Timber Sales on National Forests Doubled in Last Year.

Sales of national forest timber in the fiscal year 1917 were more than double those of 1916, according to the annual report of the forester. The total amount sold exceeded two billion feet and is valued at more than $3,715,000. During the same period about 27 million feet were cut and removed, for which the purchasers paid $1,507,000 into the federal treasury. The largest sales were made in Oregon, where about 538 million board feet were disposed of. In addition to the timber sold, approximately 113 million board feet, valued at almost $150,000, was cut under free use permit by more than 41,000 settlers living near the national forests and depending on the forests for firewood and building material to improve their homesteads.

The timber business on the eastern purchase areas, while still small as compared with the western forests, showed a decided increase, the report states. More than three times as much timber was sold and more than twice as much cut as in 1916. The material disposed of, it is pointed out, is largely of poor quality and its removal will improve the forest growth.
