ANSWERING THE THREE YEARS' CALL

(Written Specially For The Bulletin.) In completing the honor roll of the Third Regiment's men who went from Norwich in response to President Lincoln's call for three months' service the following names are to be added to those listed in previous papers: Thomas Griffin, enlisted May 11, '61, enlisted again, discharged Aug. 12, '61.

Other brave men of this regiment, all privates, since the officers have been given already, who are rated as enlisted men, serving between May 12th and Aug. 12th, are, John W. Doyle, C. L. F. Huntington and G. W. Nelson, N. A. Keables, re-enlisted Aug. 10, '62, as a private in the 26th Regiment and was mustered out August 11, '63. John M. Keeler was another who served faithfully during the three months.

Isaac N. Leonard, re-enlisted August 5, '62, as a sergeant in the 26th. He was promoted to 2nd lieutenant and was mustered out Aug. 17th, '63.

William L. Maples is recorded as having re-enlisted in the United States Army.

George B. Marshall re-enlisted July 29th, '62, as a corporal in the 18th. He continued in service and was mustered out June 27, '64.

John G. Metcalf is one of the Third's men who served during the three months' requirement.

James R. Nichols re-enlisted May 29, '62, as a sergeant in the 14th. He attained the rank of captain. He died from wounds Feb. 20, '65.

Horace Rogers re-enlisted Sept. 25th, '61, as a private in the Seventh Regiment. He was dishonorably dis-

LADIES' AUXILIARY.

Last Thursday evening the Ladies' auxiliary, Division 54, A. O. H., met at the home of Mrs. McGill of Fountain street to do Red Cross work. This week the regular meeting took place at the Buckingham Memorial. After the meeting there was a social for the purpose of entertaining the sailors.

DAUGHTERS OF VETERANS.

The annual department convention of the Daughters of Veterans, with all the tents of the state representation was held at Mystic this week. The first session was devoted to presentation of credentials, reading of reports and other routine matters. President Mrs. Mary Benjamin presided. The election of officers resulted as follows: Department president, Mrs. Effie Popping of New London; senior vice president, Mrs. Grace Manich of Bridgeport; junior vice president, Mrs. Iva Burnett of Milford; chaplain, Mrs. Augusta Roemer of Hartford; treasurer, Mrs. Elizabeth McGinn of Mystic; inspector, Mrs. Mary Griswold of charged March 10, '63. William J. Ross re-enlisted July 22, '62, as a corporal in the 18th. Later he ranked as major in the 29th. He was not mustered out until October 24, '63.

Fred Schalk re-enlisted June 6, '62, as sergeant in the 14th, attaining the rank of lieutenant. He died of wounds, May 6th, '61.

Tully W. Sterry was another of the men who served during the three months' period.

H. W. Swan re-enlisted Jan. 7, '62, as a private in the 13th. He was dishonorably discharged June 5, '62.

James H. Sweet re-enlisted Sept. 3, '62, as a private in the 26th. Later he was transferred to the Signal Corps.

James M. Sweet re-enlisted Sept. 8, '62, as a sergeant in the 13th. He was killed at Port Hudson, May 24, '62.

Richard Trimmer re-enlisted July 14th, '62, as a private in the 18th. He continued in the service till the close of the war, being mustered out June 27, '65.

James H. Vergason re-enlisted Oct. 25, '63, as a private in the 11th. Unhappily he deserted, Dec. 17, '63.

G. W. Whitteasey re-enlisted Feb. 18, '62, as sergeant-major of the 13th. He attained the rank of adjutant and rejoined Oct. 9, '62.

The last name on the list is that of G. E. Williams who served during the original three months' period.

It was on the 3rd of May, 1861, fifty-seven years ago, that President Lincoln issued his second call, this time for troops who would serve for a period of three years, unless sooner discharged.

Recruiting had been kept up vigorously from the outbreak of the war, and enlistments were still freely tendered. The presence of Governor William A. Buckingham of Norwich, who seemed with wise forethought to anticipate the needs of the general government, contributed Rev. M. McC. Dana says in his Norwich Memorial to keep up public interest in securing volunteers.

With tireless devotion Governor Buckingham sought to second every appeal of the national executive; and through him not only the town of Norwich but the state of Connecticut were kept fully abreast of the calls from time to time made upon them for men.

The reverse at Bull Run seemed to arouse anew the patriotic spirit of Norwich citizens, while the zeal of private individuals and the liberal portions of the town gave a fresh impetus to recruiting.

The Fourth and Fifth Regiments from this state had already been accepted by the war department for three years, as the condition of receiving from the state the second and third three months' regiments, which were really in excess of Connecticut's quota under the first call for troops.

In the Fourth Regiment, Norwich was represented by Major Henry W. Birge, Assistant Surgeon Edwin Bentley, with some eighteen or twenty men scattered through the different companies. It was mustered into service at Hartford in June, 1861, and sent to Chambersburg, and associated with General Patterson's troops. In November, it was stationed at Fort Richmond, near Washington.

In January, 1862, the regiment was changed from infantry into artillery; and under the management of Robert O. Tyler, who was appointed colonel, reorganized as the First Artillery. Major Birge was meanwhile transferred to the command of the Thirtieth Regiment Infantry.

So much for the preliminary service of the Norwich volunteers, who were really in excess of Connecticut's quota under the first call for troops.

The market of Helsingfors is an excellent place to study the Finns and their characteristics. From all over the surrounding country the peasants drive into the town with their produce and sell it direct to the townfolk. A small farmer may have killed a sheep or pig, and may be observed driving a keen bargain for the best cut.

Another has a few tiny kegs of butter covered with a layer of grass to keep it cool. Under old cotton umbrellas sit the market women with their high colored waists and black or white handkerchiefs tied over their heads. In a small basin are the boats of the fishermen just in from their catch. The housewives or maids pass from one stall or boat to another inspecting their wares. A little after noon the fishermen and market merchants evidently as ignorant of geography as the causes of dispute between North and South China. They wanted trouble, and they got it.

They started to cross the Yellow sea in a boat hardly safe in a large lake. Before they got clear of the islands surrounding Nippon, their craft ran upon a rock and was wrecked. Nothing was left but a mass of lumber and some of the larger size and at the end of a very rough voyage, came in sight of Shantung province, China—whether manufacture on a large scale. Rice flour is not a complete substitute for wheat flour because it lacks gluten. It can be mixed with wheat flour in conservation bread. There is a real opportunity, however, to broaden the market for what is known as "rice polish." This is the product of the brushes used in polishing rice when its brown coating is removed to produce the familiar white rice of commerce. Rice polish has been sold chiefly for stock feed, but it is a highly concentrated food, more nutritious than rice itself, because it contains valuable chemical ingredients from the surface of the grain.—Syracuse Post-Standard.

Escaped of the Japanese Soldiers Who Pined for Some Action in These World-War Days.

An amateur pirate story, that reads as if it might have been written by Mark Twain, comes from Nagasaki by way of the Kobe Japan Chronicle. It possesses elements of real romance. Yoshinaga Shinsaku, a young sub-lieutenant in the army on the reserve list, dissatisfied because he was not having active part in the great world's war, gathered about him ten companions, most of them former soldiers and lovers of adventure like himself. Armed with rifles and Japanese swords they left Mitsumi, in Higo province, Kyushu, for China, in a small motor boat on Oct. 14, for the avowed purpose of getting into some sort of a war by joining the revolutionists of Southern China. These soldiers of fortune were evidently as ignorant of geography as the causes of dispute between North and South China. They wanted trouble, and they got it.

They started to cross the Yellow sea in a boat hardly safe in a large lake. Before they got clear of the islands surrounding Nippon, their craft ran upon a rock and was wrecked. Nothing was left but a mass of lumber and some of the larger size and at the end of a very rough voyage, came in sight of Shantung province, China—whether they know that fact or not is withheld—when they were overtaken by a violent storm. After drifting about for 74 days, and nearly dying of starvation, they landed at Nomo, in Nagasaki prefecture, in a terribly emaciated condition. The men were desperate, suffering from cold, hunger and want of money. The heroes became burglars, and broke into the postoffice at the village of Nomo, secured $25, which was equally divided, according to pirate ethics, the commander declining to accept a lion's share. They repaired to a rendezvous on Amakusa Island, not far from their original place of departure, where they disbanded, after a solemn agreement to reassemble at Shanghai. Before they got away, the minions of the law were upon them and all were arrested. They frankly owned up to their revolutionary aspirations, their piracy and the burglary of the Nomo postoffice. Friends have come to their rescue and the money will be repaid and there appears to be a disposition to regard the affair as a boyish escapade. The leader, Yoshinaga, is only 20 years of age, and his companions are even younger.—East and West News.

Answer of the French. British opponents of Lloyd George argued that a French generalissimo might sacrifice British troops. The last stand of the French regiment sent to hold Mount Kemmel is the answer.—Springfield Republican.
